ART CLASSES IN THE OPEN

There's nothing like a quiet brook or creek on a sunny fall day to stimulate the creative inspirations, as these students

Lortie Is Found Guilty Could Get Life Sentence

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernard Lortie, looking tired but calm, at one point smiled Wednesday night when he was told that he had been found guilty of kidnapping Pierre Laporte, Quebec labor minister strangled last October.

The unanimous guilty verdict was made at midnight after 3½ hours of deliberations by the 12-man jury hearing his case.

The 19-year-old trade school dropout is to be sentenced Nov. 22. He faces a possible sentence of life imprisonment.

Mr. Justice Jean-Paul Bergeron told the accused after the verdict was rendered that his actions during the trial were "exemplary."

Lortie also was charged with contempt of court for throwing a small paper ball at the judge at the start of last Friday's morning sitting of the trial held in Court of Queen's Bench.

No date has been set for proceedings with the contempt charge.

The ball-throwing incident was one of a number of disruptive outbursts by Lortie during the trial, which began last Monday.

The accused, who seemed indifferent and appeared to be sleeping throughout most of his trial, was expelled twice for continued interruptions.

His last expulsion came Tuesday after he was denied a request for a week to further prepare his defence. While with anger and crying, Lortie was ordered out after calling the judge a "swine" and screaming, "We will win."

Lortie was granted a 24-hour adjournment later Tuesday to prepare his address to the court. He told the jury then that he was not preparing a defence.

In his summation Wednesday, Lortie said it was not important whether the jury found him guilty or not guilty of kidnapping the 48-year-old Mr. Laporte. What was important was whether the jury favored Quebec liberation.

At the outset of his trial Lortie refused to appoint a defence lawyer and said he would not defend himself if the Crown proceeded with the kidnapping trial first. He wanted to be tried first on the non-capital murder charge he still faces.

Wage Subsidy May Be Answer Says Campbell

VICTORIA (CP)—British Columbia's 50-per-cent wage subsidy program for welfare recipients deserves a second look from municipalities, because it is gaining widespread interest elsewhere in Canada and could be the national solution to the welfare problem, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Wednesday.

He described the thinking of some municipal leaders as backward in criticizing the program, announced 10 days ago by Premier W. A. C. Bennett. Mr. Campbell is chairman of a cabinet committee set up to administer the plan.

It is to go into effect Nov. 1 for a six-month period, covering people who received welfare for three months previous to getting a job. They must also have been residents of the province for 12 months.

Mr. Campbell said that putting welfare recipients to work on a voluntary basis would eventually prove cheaper than keeping them on social assistance rolls.

Clashes In UN Leave U.S. In Slightly Bloody Shape

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The United States emerged slightly bloodied Wednesday after the first of several clashes expected in the United Nations over whether China should be seated and Taiwan expelled.

Some observers said the U.S. suffered at least a psychological setback in pushing its "dual representation" China initiative—splitting a pair of decisions—in advance of the China debate in the General Assembly starting about Oct. 18.

Wednesday's clash came in the 25-country steering committee of the assembly on the agenda the 130 delegates will debate during the next three months.

The committee agreed by the narrow margin of 11 to 9 to include an American item on the agenda calling for a seat for China and Taiwan. There were four abstentions including Britain and France.

But by a much greater majority—17 to 2 with four abstentions—it also agreed to include the Albanian item calling for expulsion of Taiwan and seating of China in all UN bodies. Taiwan and Costa Rica opposed it and the U.S., Belgium, Japan and the Philippines abstained.

Then it defeated—nine for, 12 against and three abstentions—an American bid to debate both items under the heading "the question of China," with the rival formulations listed as sub-items. Britain and France were among those who voted against it.

Some observers saw the vote as a setback for the Americans. Others called it an outright disaster. They said it could help along some undecided countries to jump on the bandwagon of those opposed to any two-China policy.

Franco-Canadian Relations Now In A State Of Harmony

OTTAWA (CP) — French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann and External Affairs Minister Sharp expressed mutual satisfaction today that Franco-Canadian relations are now in a state of "harmony."

An external affairs spokesman said both agreed that significant progress had been made in developing relations in the last few years.

Mr. Schumann, highest-ranking French official to come to Canada since the late president Charles de Gaulle, shouted "Vive le Québec Libre" in Montreal four years ago, arrived here Wednesday night for a day of talks with Canadian leaders.

"In what was described as a 'friendly' half-hour talk, Mr. Sharp and Mr. Schumann also exchanged views on China and on the world trade situation in the context of the American economic measures. Canada and France hold "quite similar" views in favor of seating mainland China in the United Nations, the spokesman said.

Following his talk with Mr. Sharp, the French minister conferred for a half-hour with Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, then headed into a two-hour plenary session with Mr. Sharp.

Mr. Sharp, attended also by a group of French and Canadian officials. Aside from mutual expressions of interest in increasing Franco-Canadian trade, the discussion between Mr. Schumann and Mr. Pepin touched on the concrete question of expanded industrial co-operation.

The two ministers talked about the possibility of Canadian aid of Montreal obtaining a subcontract from the Da-sault aircraft corporation of France for work on the Mercure aircraft.

Bess Kills 20 Persons

TAIPEI (CP) — At least 20 persons died and 72 were injured today as Typhoon Bess injured across northern Taiwan with driving rain and 125-m.p.h. winds.

The casualty toll was likely to rise as rescuers toiled amid the devastation. More than 1,000 homes were destroyed and 2,000 badly damaged by winds and widespread flooding.

Much of Taipei was under water up to six feet deep and the disrupted electricity supply was not expected to be restored for at least another 24 hours.

Estimates of damage running into millions of dollars were still pouring into the capital but information was still scanty about the situation inland.

The typhoon howled across northern Taiwan Wednesday night and early today and by mid-morning had crossed the Taiwan Strait to Fukien province on the Chinese mainland.

Strategic Arms Talks Extended

HELSINKI (AP) — The fifth round of the United States-Soviet Union talks to limit strategic weapons closed today with both sides looking ahead to further "constructive sessions" in November in Austria. Conference sources said: "The session ended on a positive note, with both sides determined to use the period between sessions to useful advantage for resumption of constructive sessions in the sixth round in Vienna."

Changes Urged For Manpower

Medina Acquitted Of All Charges

FORT MCPHERSON, Ga. (AP) — Capt. Ernest L. Medina, found not guilty of My Lai massacre charges, says he has no bitterness toward the army but still plans to leave it.

The 35-year-old career officer who commanded a U.S. company which swept through My Lai March 16, 1968, was acquitted Wednesday of murder, involuntary manslaughter and assault after a court-martial jury of five Vietnam veterans deliberated an hour.

"I am extremely happy," he said later. "I have always had complete faith in the military and the military justice system. I always felt I'd be found innocent."

PLANS TO RESIGN

Medina, who joined the National Guard when he was 15 and has been an officer for seven years, said he still plans to resign from the army.

During the trial, Medina testified in his own behalf and maintained that he was not aware of atrocities at the time of the massacre.

"Reflecting back now, I know I lost control because there were non-combatants killed by my company," he testified. "If I had been aware of it that day, I would have stopped it."

The jury said it was convinced Medina was not aware of civilian deaths.

Medina was accused of the premeditated murder of a woman as she lay on a rice paddy outside My Lai. He testified that he shot her when she moved because he thought she had a grenade.

Planning And Efficiency Improvement Is Suggested

OTTAWA (CP) — The Economic Council of Canada called today for improved planning and efficiency in the operation of the Canada manpower program.

The council zeroes in on the federal program designed to train, move and place workers in jobs as an illustration of the main theme of its eighth annual review—the need for improved systems of making decisions in government.

While applauding many features of the five-year-old manpower program, the council questions many of its objectives and practices.

The advisory agency also outlines some failures in co-ordinating programs affecting federal labor, both among federal departments and between federal and provincial governments.

The declared aim of the manpower program, which has a budget of almost $500 million a year, is "to further the growth of Canada by endeavoring to ensure that the supply of manpower matches the demand, qualitatively, quantitatively and geographically."

While growth is the prime objective, subsidiary aims of the manpower program are to promote economic stability and fairer shares in national wealth, both among individuals and among regions.

The council observes that a comparable program in the United States places the main emphasis on the social betterment of citizens, but concludes that promoting growth is not necessarily in conflict with advancing social justice.

The review takes issue with the heavy emphasis on classroom teaching in the Canadian manpower training program, which provides about 800 different courses for about 300,000 Canadians annually.

"The heavy—in fact, almost exclusive—emphasis on institutional training in Canada is difficult to understand when experts generally agree that for many occupations and for many individuals, training in industry appears to be preferable."

Most Spent In Classrooms

In Canada, less than four cents in every dollar spent on manpower training is for training in industry, the rest in classrooms. In the U.S., by contrast, only 23 cents of the training dollar goes to institutional training, with 77 cents for on-the-job training.

The council traces the reasons for Canada's stress on classrooms to several factors, including the fact that construction of training institutions in the 1960s reduced the incentive to use industrial training.

Also, most of the industry where training could be provided is concentrated in central Canada, which would require moving persons from other regions for training.

Further, the recent slackness in the economic situation reduces the incentive of employers to participate in on-the-job training programs.

The council observes that the manpower department is conducting research into on-the-job training, and suggests that it should be expanded.

It proposes introduction of new methods of financing on-the-job training, including a levy from industries using trained men and a grant to those who train them, or tax credits to companies providing training.

The council also questions the current training program's emphasis on basic training in language, communication, mathematics and science.

Originally, the idea was to upgrade workers—nearly 40 per cent of males in 1966 and no more than elementary schooling in preparation for further training in technological skills.

However, general unemployment rather than displacement by technological advance has been the main problem in recent years.

Some Removed From Market

As a result, the teaching of basic skills has become more a social-welfare program whereby some unemployed are removed temporarily from the labor market.

Social fairness is one of the goals of the program, "but it is questionable that basic training alone is the appropriate way to deal with disadvantaged or marginal groups."

"What is required for such groups is a combination of specialized and diversified programs adapted to their particular needs."

Referring to the manpower department's system of evaluating its programs, showing that money spent was generating value in the form of jobs and higher pay for graduates, the council challenged the findings.

Other factors, such as an improvement in economic conditions generally or the natural escalation of pay rates could account for the apparent improvement in some cases.

The department concluded from a study of 1969 experience that benefits valued at between $2 and $3 accrued from every $1 worth of training. Further analysis, however, suggests "the program does not appear to have resulted in improvement of employment."

Man Is Missing Presumed Drowned

TERRACE, B.C. (CP) — A man is missing and presumed drowned after he jumped from a seaplane that ran into trouble as it was landing Wednesday at Kalum Lake, 17 miles north of Terrace.

He has not been identified.

A search will resume today. A Grumman Goose aircraft, owned by Trans-Provincial Airlines, was landing at Kalum Lake after a flight from Stewart, 200 miles north of Terrace, with eight passengers. The pilot's vision was obscured by smoke from slash burning and the plane struck a log.

The pilot steered for shore to beach the plane but, according to an airline spokesman, three passengers panicked, opened a side hatch and jumped into the lake. Two were recovered from the water unharmed but the other was not found.

Five Children Die In Fire

Grace Dabney, 26, the mother of the victims, and a son, Keith, 9, were the only family members to escape.

The victims were Terry, 10; Fonda, 8; Darryl, 7; Michael, 5; and Charles Dabney, 2.

GRAIN LEGISLATION

Opposition Raps Liberals

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal claims about participatory democracy are just window-dressing, opposition MPs contended Wednesday, citing the government's attitude on grain legislation as proof.

"People just won't tolerate this type of nonsense," Lorne Nyström (NDP—Yorkton-Melville) warned as the Commons continued debate on the government bill designed to provide income insurance for grain farmers.

under grains legislation still on the books.

The House's mood wasn't helped by an earlier tangle on widespread General Motors layoffs and the fact Trade and Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin wasn't in the Commons to answer questions.

ABSENCE CRITICIZED

Aware Mr. Pepin had scheduled a news conference, the opposition wanted him to make his statements in the Commons, not outside. Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said his absence amounted to contempt of Parliament.

Mr. Pepin made his statements outside the House despite the opposition clamor and New Democrat Leader David Lewis said this was contempt of Parliament.

In the grains debate, Mr. Southern said the "dark shadow of the Assiniboia by-election" is affecting the government's attitude on the bill. A by-election is scheduled for riding Monday.

As a member of that city's agriculture committee, a Supreme Court judge expected to be named to the Commons to answer questions.

The Temporary Services Act of 1956, aimed in Kelowna, requires the government, 150 civic make monthly payments, CUPE, wheat board for fourth other grain. These payments in—were passed on to farmers, depending on how much they had delivered to board ex-value.

The government has made no payments under this act since August, 1970. It says the stabilization bill would supersede the reserves act and consequently is making no payments.

This has led to the opposition charges of bribery, blackmail and carrot-dangling.

"I see the air-fare war has started."

Inquiry Ordered Into Death

A formal inquiry has been ordered to investigate medical procedures used on a Grand Forks, B.C., miner who died of a heart condition in Vancouver General Hospital nine months ago. Coroner Glen McDonald set the inquiry date for next Tuesday on the request of counsel representing the family of Fred Makonin, 35. Mr. Makonin had suffered a shortage of breath and chest pains while working in the mines and was then given a surface job. When his condition continued, he went to Vancouver for further medical tests. He died while undergoing tests at Vancouver General Dec. 11, 1970. Cause of death was determined at the time to be natural from his heart condition. The reasons why the victim's family has requested the inquiry were not made known.

British Columbia's minister of land and water resources said Wednesday in Regina, the greatest need facing Canada is better research and study of water resources and requirements. Ray Williston told a news conference at the end of the national water seminar that because of this, the matter of exporting water to the United States "is really not an issue. The concentration of attention ought to be towards Canadian needs now and in the future." The news conference, attended by a number of government officials from the various provinces represented, was held that no definite recommendations came out of the seminar.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson reiterated Wednesday that preference is being given at Vancouver to moving Canadian cargo despite an influx of U.S. shipments caused by dock strikes on the U.S. West Coast. He told the Commons that a report from his officials said Canadian cargo is given priority "where it is humanly possible," and that an embargo on U.S. shipments would be an unwise step. The report con-

Janet Joanna Johnson, 26, a former employee of the Mission branch of The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, will appear at a preliminary hearing Nov. 23 on a charge of theft over $50. She is charged in the disappearance of $16,500 from the bank.

Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, who raised opposition in the Commons Wednesday for not reporting to Parliament on his talks with General Motors executives, said outside the chamber the government "has no intention of telling General Motors what to do," John Mintline, GM vice-president in charge of finance, and John Barbeau, executive vice-president, met Mr. Pepin early Wednesday to discuss GM production reductions that will affect about 1,925 employees in five Canadian plants. Mr. Pepin, who evaded reporters after the morning meeting, told an afternoon news conference that GM is a U.S.-owned company with all its decisions made in the U.S. "They decide where to put plants and what styles they will produce."

Drug education must start in elementary school, D. M. Dawson, senior co-ordinator of counselling for the Vancouver School Board said Wednesday. Mr. Dawson was addressing delegates to the annual convention of the Canadian Education Association during an informal discussion session in Montreal. "Drug education must be aimed at the younger students before they become emotionally involved in the drug scene," he said.

Attorney-General A. H. MacKinnon Wednesday announced the appointment of James Toal, a former Winnipeg police superintendent, to investigate allegations of discrimination against Indian and Metis families in Brandon.

George Leith, 48, Wednesday announced he would seek the leadership of the Saskatchewan Liberal Party. The only other candidate for the leadership, left vacant with the recent death of Ross Thatcher, is Dave Stewart, interim leader. Mr. Leith, former MLA for Elrose, was defeated in the June provincial election.

The Kitchener welfare department is continuing its "get-tough" policy with youths who fail to obtain jobs because of their appearance. J. A. Bernstahl, welfare administrator, has told city council's welfare committee that 73 single persons have been dropped from public assistance since August, when the committee decided to drop two long-haired youths from the rolls. Mr. Bernstahl told a committee meeting that since then, more than 40 welfare recipients have reported that they have obtained jobs and want assistance to tide them over to their first pay checks.

Malta has accepted in principle an offer of $22.8 million a year from Britain and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization for continued use of military facilities on the Mediterranean island, the British government announced late Wednesday. Final details of the arrangement still must be settled and a new defence agreement made with Malta, said a joint statement issued in London and in Valletta. Prime Minister Dom Mintoff's acceptance of the Western offer ended speculation that the island might turn its facilities over to the Soviet Union or to Libya's Arab forces.

The White House has denied President Nixon will fly directly to Peking from Alaska next week. It said plans for the China trip will be disclosed in advance. Press secretary Ron Ziegler issued the denial Wednesday after reports circulated that Nixon would depart for mainland China after concluding his trip to Alaska Monday. Ziegler declined to state what, if any, negotiations are underway as a prelude to Nixon's visit.

State prison guards will lock all convicts in their cells "and feed them and nothing else" unless prison reforms are instituted by Oct. 7, the head of a union representing the state prison guards said Wednesday in Albany, N.Y. Jerry Wurf, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said his threat stemmed from the four-day rebellion at Attica state prison, which ended in the deaths of 30 inmates and 10 hostages.

Leonid I. Brezhnev who arrived in Belgrade Wednesday for a four-day visit in Yugoslavia, said the idea that the Soviet Union holds to a doctrine of "limited sovereignty" for Communist states is a slanderous invention. The Soviet Communist party chief's statement came after President Tito bluntly reaffirmed Yugoslavia's independence from Moscow and indirectly warned Moscow to keep hands off. Brezhnev yielded to Yugoslav pressure in affirming the principles of the 1955 Belgrade Declaration that recognized Yugoslavia's right to sovereignty, equality and non-interference in internal affairs.

Newspapers Dispute Ends But Proves Very Costly

LONDON (CP) — British publishers may have lost more than £3 million in revenue in the four-day newspaper publishing freeze over a wage dispute that halted the turnout of some 80 million copies of national and London dailies. Settlement was reached Wednesday night. As the first editions of the London papers came back on the streets today, eager readers rushed to grab every copy available. The Beaverbrook Evening Standard heralded the end of the dispute with a "Good Morning" headline and a break-fast scene cartoon in which mother tells children: "Don't be frightened children, it's only your daddy without his paper." The dispute, which disrupted some production last week, exploded into a full publishing freeze last Sunday as one union demanded readjustment of a pay increase so that its high position in the pay scale could be maintained against lower-paid workers. Publishers at first resisted this demand, ordering union workers out of their jobs and halting publication. But the intervention of Vic Feather, head

Freelance Writer Denies Promoting Crowd Violence

VANCOUVER (CP) — Freelance writer Eric Sommer, 24, a landed immigrant from the United States, told the inquiry into the Aug. 7 Gastown riot Wednesday that he had nothing to do with trying to promote crowd violence. Sommer, along with Kenneth Lester, had been named Tuesday by a police intelligence detective as being a participant in several other demonstrations and as having taken an active part in the Gastown disturbance. He told the inquiry that he went to a so-called "smoke-in" in the spruced-up former skid road area with the "hope and belief" that there would be no violence. And replying to a question from a lawyer for the Police-man's Union, he said the Vancouver police department was "solely responsible" for violence which ensued. Sommer refused when asked to give sources of information on who organized the smoke-in, which was held to protest a drug crackdown in the area. He also refused to name members of the Youth International Party. He had said in pre-riot articles in an alternative press Edmonton newspaper that the party would Vancouver

By DYCK'S PHARMACISTS

What is the present status of Vitamin C and the common cold?

Many people read last year about Dr. Linus Pauling's theory of taking massive amounts of the vitamin to treat colds. Public response was one of excitement and acceptance and acceptance.

There's more to it than that. In Ireland these loud blasts of the CMA ter of windows ing concluded of gunfire, acing of Vitamin les Hucks, a 1000 mg per Mr. Hicks.

Courier about Hucks have said Ireland more controlled research side of thing on the subject be. Mr. Hicks be conclusively ville, are members of the three week Medical Association and Mrs. Hicks article in the CMA engaged that at the moment Computer no evidence that Dr. Hicks has not worked or that not work.

Unthis time there is no evidence to show that this amount the Vitamin taken daily will harm healthy people. It is the larger amount (5,000 to 10,000 mg per day) over a period of months or years that can result in problems.

Mayor Hilbert Roth, left, and Ronald Wilkinson, centre, chairman of the Central Okanagan Community Chest, visited Sunnyvale workshop by way of promotion of the Central Okanagan Community Chest and Canadian Red Cross United Appeal campaign which begins Monday with a commercial, industrial and professional drive in city and district. Mayor Roth officially proclaimed

October as Community Chest month. A two-day residential "blitz" is scheduled Oct. 4 and 5, with Kelowna member agencies participating in the city campaign. The workshop is run by the Kelowna and District Society for Mentally Retarded Children, a member agency of the Community Chest which is hoping to raise $89,060 this year for Chest work. At right is Sunnyvale workshop member, Lennie Wishlow. (Courier photo).

UBC Medical Centre Outlined To Local Club

A new concept in medicine was the subject of the first fall meeting of the Kelowna Canadian Club Wednesday night at the El Torio.

Dr. William Gibson, member of the faculty of medicine at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, described the $60 million Health Sciences Centre to be completed in three years. Dr. Gibson is touring Canadian Clubs in B.C. explaining the centre.

The centre will have three purposes—patient care, teaching and research. There will be a 350-bed hospital, a 60-bed psychiatric unit, plus space for classrooms and resource facilities. Some buildings are already in existence.

The centre is an effort "to get all members of the medical team speaking one language," Dr. Gibson explained. Training will be provided for doctors, nurses, pharmacists, dentists, social workers and others. Students of theological colleges will learn proper techniques of hospital visiting. Patients will be those with whom doctors all over B.C. are having problems. While in the hospital they will be the responsibility of a professor, although he may allocate them to someone else. When treatment is finished, they will be returned to their regular physician.

YEAR LESS

By enabling medical students to do more practical work, the centre will cut a year off their training.

At present they must take seven years of university, followed by a year of internship in a hospital if they wish to practice general medicine, or five years of training if they wish to specialize.

Funded equally by the provincial and federal governments, the centre will be on the 40-acre site picked for a medical centre many years ago.

Stressing the "learning by doing" method, Dr. Gibson, who has an extensive medical background, accused educators of having lectured too much and not taught enough.

This centre will give real equality of opportunity for top medical care. Many people leave the province for specialist care at their own expense.

He said the fact that a centre such as this is only a short flying time away would help populate northern parts of the province.

TRAIN AIDES

The speaker also lamented the amount of time medical people spend doing work that does not require their abilities, suggesting aides might be trained at the centre.

Slides took the audience on an historical tour of the university, from the first classes in the Fairview section near the Vancouver city hall, to the "great trek of 1922" which led to establishment of the present campus in Point Grey, and pictures of the university today.

Another UBC Doctor Forecasts New Ideas

Kelowna can look forward to methods whereby facilities can be even more improved for rehabilitation of arthritic sufferers.

The statement was made by Dr. D. K. Ford, director of medicine at the University of British Columbia. He was speaking at a meeting of the Kelowna district of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society held at the Capri Wednesday.

Dr. Ford outlined some details about research in the rheumatic-arthritis field and commented favorably on rehabilitation work in the Kelowna and Okanagan areas.

He spoke of getting a team approach in Kelowna between medical personnel and rehabilitative facilities and commented favorably on work done here by C.A.R.S.

As far as research was concerned, Dr. Ford explained some of the work occurring in the field of rheumatic arthritis, the type of arthritis still a mystery to medical men.

He explained researchers were still working with cells and tissue trying to find a cure for the disease and he said details of this research were hard to explain and progress was slow due to the complicated facets of the research.

By contrast he cited the example of the space program in the United States when John F. Kennedy was able to say in so many years man would be on the moon.

Dr. Ford said it only took manpower and money as the line of direction had been discovered and only needed implementation.

"For a period of time you end up without a clear line of direction," Dr. Ford said, referring to arthritis research.

ROTH WONDERING ABOUT RATE HIKE

City council should consider opposing possible increased telephone rates, says Mayor Hilbert Roth.

The Okanagan Telephone Co. Ltd. has applied to the Public Utilities Commission of B.C. to boost rates. A public hearing begins at 9:30 a.m. Oct. 14 in city hall.

The mayor suggested the city oppose the application, but added he does not know all the facts yet. He did not see why the public should have to pay more so the company could expand.

Urgent Call For Wardens

The Kelowna organization of the Junior Forest Wardens is searching for qualified leaders to help in the guidance and direction of the organization.

Arman Diewert, a spokesman for the wardens, told the Courier they were putting out "an urgent appeal" to past Forest Wardens to come forward as leaders.

Anyone interested in helping the young boys, aged 10 to 16, who are members of the wardens, are asked to come to a meeting Tuesday at seven p.m. at Central Elementary School.

Mr. Diewert said the wardens program was entertaining and educational and has been in operation in Kelowna since 1956. It has grown ever since, offering boys the type of outdoor program they desire and appreciate.

Attempt To Form Non-Status Group

Efforts are being made to form a Kelowna branch of the B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians. The association looks after the rights of people who have lost their Indian status by marrying non-Indians or moving off reserves and giving up band memberships.

There are about 30 branches, including ones in Kamloops and Penticton. Instigating the local one are Bernice Morrison of Kelowna and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Clough of Westbank.

Friday noon is the deadline for nominations to any position on the executive council or senator or federation position on the Okanagan College Student Federation and Okanagan College Student Association.

Nominations on appropriate forms provided should be sent to Carl Karabek, OK College Student Federation chairman. Elections will be held Oct. 4.

"South Pacific," the popular Broadway show and subsequent motion picture will be shown in its movie form at St. Joseph's Hall at 8 p.m. tonight. The film presentation is being offered free of charge and refreshments will be served. Sponsoring the show is Four Seasons and Light's Travel.

Pictures of the University of B.C. campus in Vancouver as it was in 1925, shown Wednesday night at the Kelowna Canadian Club, held special interest for club president Nancy Gale. She was a student in those days.

"Strike up the band" is the command being heard in the Kelowna S.C. and A.V. School senior band room at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. The city band has resumed practices at the school. People who can play band instruments and read music are needed.

The Kelowna Riding Club will hold a western and hunter jump show on Sunday at the club grounds in Okanagan Mission. The final western and English show of the season will end with a potluck supper for riders and families.

There are still a few hardy souls. On Wednesday a woman from Banff swam at Gyro, while a woman from California sunned herself.

Demonstration Off A.S.H. To Get Money

A self-help group had planned to demonstrate tonight in support of its efforts to get money from the Central Okanagan Community Chest and Red Cross United Appeal.

Action Self Help (formerly Association Self Help) asked $420 to pay the rent of a Bernard Avenue office for a year. The budget proposed for the 1971 chest drive shows $500 for reserve fund (Association Self Help).

Chest chairman John Dyck said he understood the money was to be kept in case A.S.H. needed it. R. H. Bazett, budget committee chairman, was not available for comment.

However, the demonstration was called off following a meeting today. A spokesman said the money will be forthcoming.

The association encourages people on low incomes or welfare to help themselves out of difficulties. It was started about three years ago by Mrs. Mabel Devlin of Okanagan Mission.

Until this year operations were handled from the homes of executive members. Then an office was opened. The executive members—president Jim Burton, vice-president and executive corresponding secretary Mrs. Charles "ais, treasurer and financial secretary Mrs. Jim Burton, also vice-president and publicity convenor Mrs. Irena Hodgson—are responsible for the rent.

Meanwhile, the group is also making plans for its own financial campaign beginning next month. Mrs. Hodgson said two members plan to hitch-hike to Ottawa to interview MP Bruce Howard.

The Kelowna Bar Association has agreed to pay the phone bill.

There are some 1,500 families on welfare from Westbank to Winfield, but only about 50 are A.S.H. members. They pay $1 a year, which entitles them to a 10 per cent discount on goods bought at a local store.

Newsletters were sent to welfare recipients with their monthly cheques. They were mimeographed and sent out by the provincial welfare office.

To destroy the myth that A.S.H. was associated with the welfare department, the organization will send the letters out themselves, and they will be mimeographed by St. Pius X Church.

Orchard Park Centre Opening On Tuesday

Mines Minister Frank Richter will snip the ribbon to officially open the $15 million Orchard Park shopping centre Tuesday at 9:15 a.m.

The minister is scheduled to arrive in the city Monday about 9:30 p.m. for attendance at a special preview of the centre from 8 to 9:30 p.m. that day. Mayors from all municipalities as far as Nanaimo have been invited to attend the preview, along with various other business and corporate representatives.

Dignitaries expected to attend the official opening of the centre Tuesday include Bruce Ward, head of Simpsons-Sears western region; Marathon Realty western region general manager, Philip Boname and assistant manager from Vancouver, John McLernon.

Other Simpsons-Sears officials present will include Barry Hearn, Orchard Park manager and director for the province; and Orchard Park operations manager, Michael Melema.

The long-awaited opening of the 31-acre complex off Highway 97 is the topping on construction icing which began last November. The huge centre, offering 350,000 square feet of leasable floor space, will have a capacity for about 51 businesses firms.

About 21 stores will be in operation in time for the opening. The complex has been stocked with between $5 or $6 million worth of merchandise. One of the special features of the centre is the all-enclosed,

Mayor Criticizes Service Suggests City Takeover

Charges by Mayor Hilbert Roth that natural gas rates are too high were refuted by an official of Inland Natural Gas Co. today. In fact, the official said rates for residential users are 19 per cent below what they were in 1957, when the company began service.

Mayor Roth said council should form a committee to investigate distribution of natural gas by the city, the same as it does electricity.

Inland entered into a 21-year contract with Kelowna in 1955, under which it pays three per cent of the gross revenue from natural gas sales to the city, in addition to taxes.

"I'm surprised to hear there is dissension," said D. F. Blane of Vancouver, vice-president of sales and service for Inland.

"We have always had very good relations with the city," Blane said. Because of increased sales, the company has been able to cut rates, and sees no increases for the immediate future, said Mr. Blane. The Public Utilities Commission sets how much profit utilities can make.

Residential charges dropped about eight per cent May 1, 1967, four per cent Aug. 1, 1968, and two per cent Apr. 1, 1969, and five per cent Dec. 1, 1965. Similar reductions were made in general commercial rates,

Mr. Blane said. New rates were established for large industrial users.

The mayor charged the company with reducing its repair and maintenance services.

"When Inland started in 1957, there were not many service facilities available," said Mr. Blane. "Now there are independent servicemen, and we prefer to let them have the business."

"If a person has problems, we will send a maintenance man if they pay. But generally parts are required, and it is less costly for dealers to keep them on hand."

Eliminating some free maintenance service is one reason the company has been able to cut prices, he said. B.C. Hydro does the same for electrical furnaces.

The company services outlying communities from here, and Mr. Blane pointed out their employees pay city taxes.

The city buys electricity from West Kootenay Power and Light Co. Ltd. and distributes it to residents.

The city makes about $400,000 a year profit from electrical sales, reported city finance director H. K. Hall. Inland is to pay $28,650 for gas sales last year, plus taxes on its property here. Both amounts help reduce general taxes.

Public Involvement Officer Assigned To Big Water Study

More public awareness and information on the $2 million Canada-British Columbia Okanagan Basin water study will be the job of W. J. Horswill, who has been appointed public involvement leader for the survey.

A University of British Columbia political science graduate, Mr. Horswill has done post-graduate work at the University of Madrid, Spain, and more recently in social anthropology and community studies at Simon Fraser University. He received an academic scholarship to Chile in 1965, the president's research grant from Simon Fraser in 1967, and a federal research grant in 1969 for community development studies.

Mr. Horswill's new duties will involve assurance the development plans for management of water resources in the Okanagan Basin are consistent with the desires of Valley people, and initially take the form of developing public awareness and knowledge of the study so residents will have some background information when presented with a choice of alternatives for evaluation.

The assignment will be "extremely challenging" and will require the "complete co-operation of study participants as well as residents and organized interested groups in the Valley," said study director, Murray Thomson.

New York City. His most recent position prior to joining the basin study was as director of "Keegenah House" hostel, Inner City Service project at Vancouver.

Training For Blind Helped By Appeal

This is another in a series of articles on member agencies of the Central Okanagan Community Chest. This one concerns the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

The 1971 allotment for this worthy agency is $5,200, which will form a portion of the funds required to assist in helping the blind in our area.

There are 3,000 registered blind people in the B.C.-Yukon division of the CNIB, and out of this total about 50-60 are residents of this area.

Available to these people are all the CNIB services, which include educational and vocational training, rehabilitation and mobility training, employment and library services (talking books). Another service available to our local blind is a residence in Vancouver for single blind persons and trainees. There is also a blind senior citizens' home in Victoria.

Some of the other activities in the local area are recreation sponsored through the CNIB sponsored Okanagan Valley White Canoe Club. An organized program of bowling and cribbage goes on weekly besides the monthly meetings of the club.

This spring Kelowna was honored to host the B.C. Blind Bowling Championship and the Regional Cribbage Tournament for the Okanagan Valley. In addition to this, home visits are made by a home handicraft teacher to interested blind citizens, as well as regular visits to the blind by the travelling field secretary.

These services and numerous others are made possible by funds supplied in part by the Central Okanagan Community Chest.

Take a moment to think if you became blind how important these services would be to you, so that you could lead a more useful and happier life. After you think about it donate to your United Appeal Campaign and remember if you don't do it it won't get done.

First Meet For OMMLRA

The first meeting of a regional civic bargaining group was held today at city hall, however no details were immediately available.

The Okanagan Mainline Municipal Labor Relations Association was recently accredited to bargain with the Canadian Union of Public Employees for civic workers in Kelowna, Penticton, Kamloops, Salmon Arm, Osoyoos and Oliver.

Under new provincial legislation, the association was formed to negotiate a two-year contract with the Canadian Union of Public Employees. The contract, ending Dec. 31, was negotiated in 1968 through the Okanagan Mainline Municipal Association.

Kamloops local has challenged the legality of that city belonging to the group. A supreme court justice is expected to make a ruling next week.

The group would make separate contracts with each local. Talks between Kamloops and Local 900 began Sept. 3. The provincial government has appointed a mediator.

Talks have not started in Kelowna, which has about 150 civic workers belonging to CUPE. Kamloops has more, the other communities fewer.

... Cooler

Friday to be cool and cloudy, some afternoon shower activity, High and low Wednesday in the city was 68 and 38, compared with 68 and 23 at Kelowna airport. High today should be 70 to 75, with an overnight low from 40 to 45 degrees. High Friday is expected to be in the upper 60's.

Champions For Dinner

A committee comprised of five Kelowna sportsmen has been formed to screen and select athletes to attend the Banquet of Champions to be held in January.

The committee, comprised of Don MacIntyre of the Okanagan Swim Club; Wilf Hoffman of the Judo Club; Alex Trytula of juvenile soccer; Ross Campbell of the Kelowna Gym Club and Wes Gunther of the Okanagan Track and Field Club, will pick Kelowna area athletes who have won a B.C. championship or better or have been selected to the B.C. team.

Another item on the agenda for the 29 people representing 16 sports groups at a meeting Wednesday, was the need for more playing fields. Jack Brown of the Kelowna recreation department explained the progress of the sports complex.

BELFAST RESIDENT

All The Irish Aren't Fighting

By BARRY GRILLS

Courier Staff

There's more to the trouble in Ireland these days than the loud blasts of bombs, the shatter of windows and the echoes of gunfire, according to Charles Hicks, a Belfast resident currently visiting Kelowna.

Mr. Hicks talked with The Courier about the problems in Ireland more from the human side of things.

Mr. Hicks and his son, Neville, are visiting Canada for three weeks, staying with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Snowball.

Mr. Hicks is a mechanical engineer with Davidson and Company in Belfast. His son has finished his first year of medical studies at Queen's University in Belfast.

In Mr. Hicks' case his son was one of the main reasons for the trip to Canada in the first place.

"I wanted to give him a wider view of things," Mr. Hicks explained. "The average person in Ireland wonders that if the situation is so insoluble, why stay there?"

Mr. Hicks lives in a residential section of Belfast that has seen little or no trouble itself. But the battle is within earshot as he and his family have heard gunfire and the exploding of bombs in the distance.

Mr. Hicks explained the effects of the situation on the population not directly affected. "There's a helplessness in regards to solving the problem. About 95 per cent of the population has a feeling of resolve. We're going to work our way through."

But he added there was a feeling of worry in the backs of their minds about the people they call "the mad bombers."

There seems to be so little reason behind what they do. He said people in Ireland want to get on with their work and make the country grow economically.

Tangibly, other than the spiritual effects of the Irish situation, life and services basically continue as normal.

"One notable restriction is transport. Buses are hijacked and commandeered to use as barricades. They've had to curtail services except in daylight hours. It's alright in the summer but when winter comes travel will be more restricted."

The population of Belfast is 450,000 people and most of them want or require travel across the city and they depend on the bus service and without it, movement is very restricted.

"I'm only speaking of people in unaffected parts of the city," Mr. Hicks said. "People in the affected parts are having a bloody awful time."

Young people and children are affected by the situation as well, Mr. Hicks explained, saying that there were instances when 12-year-old children were throwing bricks and stones. He wondered about the parents of these children.

However, Mr. Hicks added there was no trouble crossing the border into Ireland and Northern Ireland and he said people in the southern portion of the country were very friendly.

He noted as well that Ireland's population is now one half of what it was in 1840.

been in Canada for three weeks and it is his first personal contact with relatives such as Mrs. Snowball since before the Second World War, although he has been in contact through the mails.

FAMILY TREE Part of his reason for visiting Canada is his interest in the family tree of his relatives. He is tracing the gaps within its structure.

"The average inhabitant of Northern Ireland wishes it were all solved," Mr. Hicks said, "with or without a boundary."

"There is great hope for the future on a long-term basis through the European Economic Community which could unify the countries."

The action of the British troops has been highly commendable in their peace-keeping mission, I might add."

Mr. Hicks compared the situation to the situation of Quebec and its small minority of radicals that stir up trouble. The same percentages apply in Ireland.

"Most people just wish it were solved," he said.

Chief Bar To Solution Of Crisis Is Gold One

The chief bar to a solution of the world money crisis is a gold one. There are both real and symbolic problems attached to what prices countries should put on a pile of gold about the size of two moving vans, according to a news release from New York.

The metal is the American gold stock, $10 billion worth. That's more gold than any other country has. The United States wants to keep on pretending it's worth $35 an ounce, but the rest of the world puts a $42 value on it. In other words, they put a lower value on the dollar in relation to gold.

Aside from the price of gold, a solution to the current money troubles seems simple enough.

The U.S. wants other countries to raise the value of their currencies so it will be easier for the U.S. to sell to them and so their exports to the U.S. will cost more.

Those countries say they will change their currencies' values if the U.S. will cancel its extra 10-per-cent tariff on dutiable imports. The U.S. already has said it would cancel the tax if the currency revaluations are made.

Thus, each side has agreed to one condition set by the other.

But the other countries also want the U.S. to increase the value of gold. The U.S. refuses. One reason is that earlier this year the U.S. government repeatedly said the gold price would not be changed. Apparently it feels it should stick by this declaration.

The report goes on to say that another reason is pride. To raise the price of gold would be a formal admission that the U.S. dollar is worth less than it was.

But there is also a matter of pride on the other side. Speakers at a recent economic conference of the European countries said that the U.S. "should share the burden" of any new money ailment. That meant that since other countries would have fewer exports to the U.S., the U.S. should be willing to admit the fall in the value of the dollar.

American economists defending the present gold price say the other side just wants to punish America for spending more overseas than it earns from its exports.

However, regardless of whether the U.S. changes its official price, gold is already actually worth more than $35 and major producers can get $42 an ounce for all they need to sell.

In another way, too, the $35-an-ounce gold price is only folklore now.

No American has been able to turn in his U.S. paper dollars for gold since 1934. For the last two years, no foreign citizen has been able to get gold for dollars. And since Aug. 15 not even a foreign government has been able to change dollars for gold at $35, by order of the U.S. president.

Problem Of Prisons

(Victoria Colonist)

If the tragedy at the Attica Correctional Facility, to give the top-security prison its official name, has proved anything at all, it is that the authorities must undertake the widest examination of the entire prison system—and urgently. This applies not to the United States alone, although the requirement is more urgent there, but to Canada and any other state concerned with the problems of penology generally and rehabilitation in particular.

The question is: should regulations make the life of a convict easier, more nearly normal? Or should they tighten the discipline—to which he is subject?

That is an over-simplification, of course, because different cases obviously require different treatments. A man convicted of almost any sort of offence under the Criminal Code except the political should be responsive to rehabilitation. For the revolutionist, it is suggested, there is very little hope that he would listen to any sort of argument or persuasion that was intended to alter his convictions. He would resist anything of the sort, and pressure would be likely to increase his fanaticism. And he would be right in the sense that a man's political beliefs are his private affair—until he attempts to force them upon somebody else or society in general.

It appears it was the political prisoners at Attica, the militant dissenters, who comprised the majority of the rioters and gave them leadership. They were simply pursuing the same revolutionary goals inside the institution that brought them there in the first place. Are more tolerance, more freedom, more concessions to this type of offender likely to alter his outlook upon a system he is determined to destroy? Or will they encourage him in his rebelliousness in the belief that he is breaching the defences of society, that by the pressures of his increasingly imperious demands the walls actually will come tumbling down?

It is pointless to discuss the wisdom of the decision of Governor Nelson Rockefeller and the Attica prison authorities to use force in the face of defiance and in spite of the risk to the hostages. But the divergence of reactions emphasizes the need to reassess the penal system in general and administrations everywhere.

Dr. Vernon Fox spoke for one side when he said: "What happened at Attica was despicable. . . . The primary reason for the use of force is always to create an image for the public." He is a criminologist at Florida State University.

But, said Governor Rockefeller, "The tragedy was brought on by the highly-organized, revolutionary tactics of militants who rejected all efforts at a peaceful settlement, forcing a confrontation and carrying out cold-blooded killings they had threatened from the outset."

At Kingston last April, it will be recalled, riotous convicts held six guards hostage for four days, and although they eventually released them, they murdered two of their fellow-prisoners whom they called "undesirables." Thirteen are still facing charges of murder, and a number of guards were charged with assault after the riot ended.

There must be a middle ground where those charged with penal administrative responsibility and those insisting on the necessity of reform can meet and set a realistic policy.

It must be the public's concern that there is no abuse of the very considerable power in the hands of those who have the responsibility for prison administration. And at the same time there must be sympathy for men who are exposed to the possible violence of fanatics. There must be a formula for controls without tyranny, the rule of law as against licence.

This whole area is one of most delicate adjustment, but of high priority for the sake of the health and security of the nation.

TROUBLE IN PARADISE

Ulster's School System Is Divided Religiously

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A new school year has begun in troubled Northern Ireland but the classrooms of the Six Counties are no haven from the deadly religious division which has split Ulster into bitterly-opposed camps.

In fact Ulster's school system is officially divided in the same way as other aspects of Northern Ireland life, with Protestant and Roman Catholic children going their separate ways.

Ostensibly children of any religion can attend the state—or "county"—schools spread across the north.

But in practice these institutions, financed by public funds, make up the Protestant side of primary and secondary education in Ulster.

The majority of Catholic youngsters attend classes in what are called "voluntary" schools.

There the church has the upper hand although the state pays all the salaries of teachers and covers between 65 and 80 per cent of building and maintenance costs.

Sectarian separatism is a fact of life in Northern Ireland.

Yet there is sharp disagreement over the role, if any, played by the divided school system in promoting the intolerance and bigotry which have again erupted into orgies of violence.

SOME SEEK CHANGE

Some Ulstermen alarmed at the prospects of all-out civil war have no doubts that the present organization of schools must be changed if a sense of solidarity transcending the barriers of religion is ever to develop within Northern Ireland society.

But not even the most ardent integrationists underestimate the difficulties which would beset such a policy.

An end to the present segregation at school would therefore have to be brought about gradually, said a spokesman for the Northern Ireland Civil Rights Association.

The association, however, doesn't consider separate schools a major factor in the current Ulster crisis.

For the moment, the group is preoccupied with what it considers to be more urgent, important issues—guarantees of political equality for the minority Catholics and abolition of the emergency internment of suspected trouble-makers in Northern Ireland.

The Civil Rights Association has played a front-line role in the Ulster upheavals of the last few years.

As part of the concern it expresses for mass living conditions on both sides of Ulster's sectarian line, it says the most urgent educational worry in Northern Ireland at present is the alleged inadequacy of school facilities for Protestants as well as Catholics.

WANTS MORE FREEDOM

The association also wants to see Ulster parents given greater freedom to withdraw their youngsters from the religious influences brought to bear on children in even the county schools of Northern Ireland.

Viewed from the standpoint of the violence now plaguing Ulster, the existence of separate schools for Protestants and Catholics seems to yield at least one benefit—the fact that children from mutually-opposed religious communities are kept at a distance from one another.

Only in religiously-mixed residential areas is there a possibility of physical clashes between opposing groups of schoolchildren.

Usually this kind of conflict is restricted to spasms of jeering.

But in times when tensions rise to an explosion point in mixed areas of cities like Belfast, British troops take up positions designed to prevent actual battles between the rival sides at the school level.

The troops derive some consolation from knowing that sports fixtures, frequently an occasion for fistfights at the best of times in hot-tempered Ireland, are not something they have to worry about since games pitting Protestant against Catholic schools are unknown in Ulster.

This degree of schoolboy separation may strike some outsiders as bordering on a pariah and bound to produce dangerous misunderstandings once Ulster's children take their places in the adult world.

But William Cardinal Conway, Catholic primate of all Ireland, vigorously defends the idea of church-controlled schools.

A child "has to learn to live his faith and he'll do this with much greater security and confidence if he spends his school day in a place where this way of life is seen as something shared between parents, pupils and teachers alike," Cardinal Conway wrote in a 1970 pamphlet.

Such an atmosphere "cannot be maintained in a state school," the cardinal said.

Capital Of Riviera In A Tizzy About Proper Form Of Sport

ST. TROPEZ, France (AP) — This avant-garde capital of the gay Riviera has been in a tizzy all season about the proper form of sport "des seins nus," the topless fashion in vogue on its beaches.

For all its fame as a summer festival of freakouts, St. Tropez always has had a snob side, insisting that form and convention be rigidly observed in its far-out fashions.

Does a lady, for instance, dress for lunch topside?

Mais oui, answered L'Aurora, the Paris daily, taking a firm line against unfettered bachelors in a restaurant. It is bad form, if not downright impudent, the editors decreed, to park one's accoutrements on the table or perchance permit them to dunk in the bouillabaisse, the pungent fish chowder of the Mediterranean.

CANADA'S STORY
Britain Paved Way For Labor Unions

By BOB BOWMAN

Although Labor Day is celebrated on the first Monday in September, the birthday of organized labor in Canada might well be September 23. It was on that date in 1873 that the Canadian Labor Union was formed. It was the beginning of nationally organized labor in Canada and followed a convention arranged by the Toronto Trades Assembly.

In those days there were about 100 local unions throughout Canada, but only 31 were represented at the Toronto meeting forming the Canadian Labor Union. They came from Ottawa and Hamilton. Membership was five cents every three months!

Labor unions had a difficult time until 1871, because they were held to be "in restraint of trade." Then, Britain passed a "Magna Carta of Trades Unionism" which established the legality of trades unions, and the movement spread quickly to the United States and Canada.

Even so, 13 union leaders in Toronto were arrested in 1872 for calling a strike. Prisoners wanted a 54-hour week but Toronto publishers were offering a 60-hour week for $10 pay. There was a mass protest when the union men were arrested, and 10,000 people demonstrated outside the legislative buildings in Toronto.

One of the men opposing labor was George Brown, publisher of the Globe, who was Sir John A. Macdonald's strongest political opponent. Sir John was glad to take up the cause of labor and Canada's parliament quickly passed legislation that opened the way for more effective union development.

The first local union in Canada may have been at Quebec in 1827 when printers were organized. Other small unions developed in other parts of Canada gradually, generally to oppose mechanization of their industries. In 1852, the Journeymen Tailors of Toronto were organized to oppose the introduction of sewing machines.

Shoemakers formed a union called the Knights of St. Crispin to try to prevent the employment of unskilled workers. In those days, shoemakers were highly-skilled.

The Knights of Labor also grew rapidly in Canada in the 1880s, organizing men and women in small communities.

OTHER SEPT. 23 EVENTS

1723—Site of present-day Toronto was bought from Mississauga Indians.

1844—Governor Metcalfe dissolved parliament and campaigned in an election in which John A. Macdonald became a member of parliament for the first time.

1908—University of Alberta opened at Edmonton with 57 students.

1937—Prime Minister Diefenbaker addressed general assembly of United Nations.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

MORE ON CADETS

Sir:

A letter to the editor from "A Taxpayer" regarding the cadet movement appeared in the Courier Sept. 18, and I would like to comment about this particular organization. First of all Mr. Editor, I am very surprised at you printing such rubbish as "Mr. Taxpayer" writes, as your paper is a strong supporter of the cadet organization. However, I guess the "freedom of the press" is one of your beliefs. This I concur as it does show the twisted thinking of some people.

I have two sons, who during their teens were members of the local cadet organization. One a navy cadet and the other an army cadet. I am proud of my two sons, with the help of the so-called "highly paid" instructors they are respected young men of the community. To me the cadet movement is the finest organization we have for youth today.

I would gladly see the government spend four times that amount on each cadet branch and in no way do I begrudge the mere pittance of $1.83 per cadet of my tax money.

Obviously "Mr. Taxpayer" does not have a son fortunate enough to be a cadet and if he did have one, I would gather from his letter he would rather have him trained to smoking that "fabulous plant" and drinking the "bubbly stuff," beer.

The opportunities and training these young men receive from the cadet organization is unbelievable. Each cadet receives individual attention, special training and personal help if needed.

If each young man in Canada were to take advantage of the cadet movement, we would have little or no problems with our youth today.

We the parents of all these cadets, take our hats off to the commanding officers and their assistants who take of their time to be interested in helping us to guide our sons to become good citizens of our local communities and Canada.

Yours sincerely,
"AN APPRECIATIVE PARENT"

most outstanding in British Columbia today.

In conclusion, regarding the "highly paid instructors," I would invite the writer to join us as an instructor, that is, provided he can meet the stringent qualifications. He would then have the opportunity of using 80 or 100 days of his spare evenings and weekends each year; pay all his own travelling expenses; purchase his many uniform accoutrements and use his personal vehicle to transport cadets to Vancouver, Spokane, etc., to participate in the various competitions. I am certain from personal experience that he would be pleased to receive his 28 days pay to compensate for at least part of his out-of-pocket expenses.

Yours truly,
CAPT. NORMAN J. HILBORN, CD
Commanding Officer,
903 Squadron BCD Kelowna Cadet Corps.

THOSE BILLBOARDS

To The Hon. W. A. C. Bennett, Premier of British Columbia, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, British Columbia.

Dear Mr. Bennett:

I am nearly at the end of a wonderful three-month holiday in this beautiful province of yours. We have toured much of British Columbia, delighting in the weather and marvelling at the scenery, made so much more accessible by your fine roads, particularly the new Yellowhead Highway from Kamloops to Jasper. I would also compliment the Parks Branch on the lovely spots they have chosen for camp sites and the clean and tidy condition in which they keep them.

One drive which always gives such pleasure is the approach from the south to your own home town of Kelowna. To suddenly discover the Okanagan Lake and the whole city spread in a panoramic view before one is simply breathtaking! Please don't ever spoil it.

And this is what puzzles and worries me. How can you bear to allow those hideous billboards to accumulate along Highway 97, particularly the cluster on the right, south of Kelowna. One is even obliged, covered with a huge piece of bare plywood, and yet another black monstrosity looks as though it is going to be covered with many small advertisements which surely will be most hazardous to the travelling public.

I understand there is difficulty as the area is Indian Reserve, but what hope is there of these billboards being removed? Yet another one has been erected this week. Is there anything you can do?

Please Mr. Bennett, please don't let anyone for any reason abuse your lovely province. Always keep British Columbia beautiful.

Yours sincerely,
KAY ELDERFIELD,
Fulmer, Ducks, England.

Suggestion Boxes Saved $15 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Suggestion boxes in federal offices have saved the government an estimated $15 million since 1952.

Frank Adams, executive secretary of the civil service commission's incentive board, said Wednesday the boxes saved taxpayers about $1.25 million last year alone.

Suggestions ranged from a cost-cutting way to handle machine-gun ammunition to a new design for shipboard canteen—the latter possibly inspired by the infamous Bonaventure error.

They earned public servants $35,000 in reward money. During the 19 years since the boxes were installed they have saved the government about $15 million and earned $409,000 for those who thought them up.

BIBLE BRIEF

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service," Romans 12:1.

Sacrifice is a word that we do not like to hear for it speaks of something being laid on the altar. It is easy to put our all in the pulpit in talking or in the pew listening, but to put our all on the altar is something else.

The fall training session hosted by the Kelowna Club was a successful exercise in building a clear understanding, of all four levels of membership and their duties, from local clubs, to council, to regional and international.

A NEW YOU

Never Too Late For A Waistline

By EMILY WILKENS

A young friend of mine, who five years, recently decided to have two babies in the last whelp up a red, white and blue needlepoint belt in tune with the current emphasis on both wide belts and patriotic colors.

She stitched up 24 inches in a three-inch wide, dynamic geometric pattern, then decided to try on her creation before adding the finishing touches of eyelets and crisscross ribboning. To her horror, there was a four-inch gap where the ends should have met in front! Although she thought she had gotten her girlish figure back after each pregnancy, the inches had been creeping up on her unnoticed because she'd been wearing shifts, A lines and tunic top pant costumes.

The belt itself was easy enough to fix—she just stitched some more. But this didn't help her unhappy feeling that she was really out of shape. Her cry for advice, I'm sure, is echoed by many women of all ages across the country, who suddenly realize that waistlines are back in fashion and their own simply aren't measuring up. For those in this dilemma, I say there's more than hope ahead. A waistline that expands easily can contract, too, with a little bit of work and will power. Try these exercises and slim down—FAST!

The Waistline Special: It's vital to tone up all the muscles which affect the dimensions of this area. The following exercise is a great side stretcher:

Lie flat on your back, arms outstretched, palms down. Bend knees over your chest and then, holding them together, drop legs as far right diagonally as possible. Keep arms and back flat on floor throughout. Now then, with knees as close together as possible, pull them along the floor until level with your waist, swing them back across chest to original position and drop them diagonally over to the left side without breaking the rhythm. Simulating a figure eight. In continuous movement, repeat the figure eight ten times; work up to 20.

Pendulum Stretch: Stand erect with legs about 14 inches apart, arms in front of you. Grasp the ends of a towel with arms spread as widely as comfortable for a 10 to 15 second hold. The towel taut throughout, raise arms above your head; now bend straight to the right as far as you can, feeling the long stretch on your left side. Come up straight, repeat to the left. Knees should be slightly flexed. Repeat 10 times on each side; work up to 20. You'll find you can stretch a little further each day.

ROUND DANCE CLASSES

Sept. 23 in the Women's Institute Hall with Kay and John Hutchinson.

Oct. 4, round with Gary Kehoe and Janet MacDonald in the Women's Institute Hall, call 763-4852.

Square dancing as we know it today, is commonly considered American in origin, but in actual fact it has been an evolution from the old European forms of dance. It has, of course, been influenced by local environments in each geographic area (e.g. eastern square dancing versus western square dancing). It remains high in popularity as a recreational activity both in the United States and Canada. The fact that it is continually changing with new calls and movement, makes it a challenge for even the experienced dancer.

ANN LANDERS

Dogs And Cats Mean More Than Three Sons

Dear Ann Landers: I liked your answer to the lady who showed pictures of her dog when the women she worked with bragged about their children and passed around snapshots.

I have both children and pets, and I can tell you quite honestly that I've had more pleasure from my pets than I've had from my three sons. I have never demanded anything of my children, just hoped to raise them to be good citizens and independent. They are both. I am now in my 70s, live alone (wouldn't have it any other way) and I have two Yorkshire terriers and a Persian cat. The four of us get along beautifully. I am just as proud of their little shenanigans as I am of my sons' achievements—which are considerable. The terriers (Malcolm-the-Moose and Super-Star) have distinctive personalities. The cat (Madame La Zonga) is a real aristocrat. They are wonderful company. I am never lonely.

I'm sure some of my neigh-

Mentally Retarded Topic Of S. Okanagan Seminar

A home care management seminar for the mentally retarded was held at the South Okanagan Unit on Sept. 17 and 18. This seminar was a training program for volunteers to aid parents in the care and development of their children. The volunteers taking part will receive further training in Vancouver in the spring of 1972.

There were two representatives from each of the following Valley associations for the Mentally Retarded: Kelowna, Vernon and Revelstoke.

The seminar was conducted by Miss M. Heseline, chairman of Home Care Management of the British Columbia Association for the Mentally Retarded; Mr. L. Stewart, program officer of the B.C.A.M.R. and Mrs. A. Rosset editor of the B.C. Advisor for BCAMR who is also a member of the Vernon Association.

Six mothers and six children also took part in the seminar; thus were given a general idea of their children's potential and aids in their development.

On Saturday representatives of the associations for mentally retarded from Kamloops to Oliver met with six executive members of the B.C. Association to discuss organizing regional units in the area of residences, adult services and home care. The association hopes to learn the needs of mentally retarded in the Valley and with the aid of the British Columbia government will be enabled to provide good residences, better opportunities for work and recreation in the community, so that adult mentally retarded may be integrated into the community. The parents may receive guidance and assistance for their families by professional

Special Visitors To Brenda Mine

PEACHLAND — Brenda Mine will have some distinguished visitors next week.

Following a convention in Seattle, members of the Society of Mining Engineers of the American Institute of Mining, Metallurgical and Petroleum Engineers will tour the southern interior of B.C.

Founded more than a century ago, this group consists of engineers and geologists from Canada and the United States. In addition to Brenda, which started production last year, they will visit the Hope slide area, Similkameen Mining Co. projects at Princeton, Craigmont Mine near Merritt, and mines in the Highland Valley. Sherwin F. Kelly, Merritt professional engineer, will guide them.

FAMILY RELATIONSHIP TORONTO (CP) — Mothers who use tranquilizers and other pills on a daily basis are likely to encourage their children to be drug users, Dr. Reginald G. Smart of Toronto's Addiction Research Foundation studied 14,800 students. He found that a teen-ager whose mother is a pill popper is three times more likely to take LSD, smoke marijuana or sniff glue, and is six times as likely to use opium or heroin than adolescents whose mothers don't indulge.

Middle East-Type Island Interest Is Growing Here

A plan by a Kelowna man for a Middle East-like island in Okanagan Lake is gaining support.

E. A. Haymour plans to develop the five-acre island across from Squally Point, about half way between Penticton and Kelowna, on the east side of the

Who Suggested Kamloops Move?

KAMLOOPS — Who suggested moving headquarters of the Union of B.C. Municipalities from New Westminster to Kamloops? Apparently not anyone from here.

During the UBCM convention last week in Victoria, it was suggested the offices be moved to Victoria to be closer to government officials. Someone voiced the idea that, since Kamloops is in the centre of the province, offices should be there. "I don't think it was anyone from here," said Ald. Tony Ramano, an executive member. Kelowna representative Ald. S. A. Hodge suggested the offices be moved to that city because Premier W. A. C. Bennett lives there.

lake. He plans 50 Arabian-style tents with shishkabob facilities, a giant camel with food and washroom facilities, and a tent where up to 3,000 people could watch programs, including belly dancers. A plastic Ogoopogo would be in a little cave. A floating island offshore would have more tents. Boats would connect the island with Kelowna, Peachland, Vernon and Penticton.

Shares would be sold. The developer told Penticton council he has been working on the project for a month, and is ready to speed it on its way if engineering and docking clearances are given. Target date for the opening is June, 1972. Most of the facilities would be dismantled after the summer.

Mr. Haymour came from the Middle East. He said he operated barber schools in Edmonton. Penticton city council expressed interest in the matter. A request for docking facilities at the foot of Martin Street was referred to the city engineer. Earlier Mr. Haymour unveiled his idea to Peachland municipal council.

Great-Grandmother's Knife Used To Cut Wedding Cake

Francis Wayne Bosley, son of Dennis Bosley of Rutland, married Rhonda Jean McKeown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McKeown of Clearwater. Rev. E. Sages officiated in Clearwater Roman Catholic Church.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father. She wore a lace over silk full-length dress, with empire waistline, banded with lace rucking and tiny embroidered pink rosebuds. The long, misty train fell from the headband of tailored white bows, topped by a bouffant veil. She carried trailing white rosebuds. Her pink and blue garter was made by her paternal grandmother, Mrs. McKeown of Victoria. "Something old" was a locket, also from her paternal grandmother. "Something borrowed" was a moon-shaped brooch from her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Stewart of Winfield.

Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Marshall Meronuck of Williams Lake. The matron of honor chose a street-length gown in mauve. Pink flowers and net made the headband, and she carried pink carnations.

Bob Bosley, the groom's brother, was best man. Elmer Bosley of Kelowna, another brother, was usher, with David McKeown, brother of the bride. Mrs. W. J. Bradley of Armstrong played the organ.

DUTCH LAKE RESORT

For the reception at Dutch Lake Resort, the bride's mother wore a two-piece dress of rose fortrel with white accessories and an orchid corsage. The wedding cake was made and decorated by the bride's mother. On top were a miniature bride and groom under blue flowers, silver leaves and pink rosebuds.

The knife is owned by the bride's great-grandmother, Mrs. Kernaghan. The bride's parents used it to cut their wedding cake. Pink, white and blue ribbons decorated it. Master of ceremonies was Peter Todolychuck. Father Sages asked the blessing. A toast to the bride was given by another brother, Bruce McKeown. Bob Bosley gave one to

Early Death Is Facing Four Children

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jacqueline Collum says she first learned that her four young children apparently were doomed to early death when her eldest had trouble finding her way home from school.

"The doctors couldn't find anything wrong with her eyes; then I learned what it was," Mrs. Collum said. "Patricia Ann didn't just die Saturday. She's been dying slowly before my eyes for a long time now."

Mrs. Collum, 34 and divorced, said the doctors told her Patricia Ann, 13, and her other children have Batten's disease.

Children who get the disease invariably die, usually from secondary infections brought on by greatly lowered resistance, said Dr. Neil Raskin, assistant professor of neurology at the University of California School of Medicine in San Francisco.

He said the rare disease probably is a hereditary metabolic disorder of fatty tissues in the brain and retina.

Mrs. Collum says doctors tell her the disease is considered incurable but she refuses to give up hope.

Vancouver Seaman Lost Overboard

VICTORIA (CP) — A Canadian seaman was lost overboard Wednesday from the supply ship HMCS Provider, a Canadian Forces spokesman said Wednesday night.

Able Seaman William Gordon de Ballinhard of Vancouver, a steward aboard the Provider, was seen by another seaman to fall overboard at about 2 a.m.

The ship, en route to San Diego from Hawaii at the time, hove to for nine hours for a search by ship's radar, lifeboat and helicopter. The body was not recovered.

A board of inquiry will be convened to investigate.

Possibility Of A Split Between CLC And CUPE

EDMONTON (CP) — The possibility of a split between the Canadian Labor Congress and its largest affiliate, the Canadian Union of Public Employees, loomed Wednesday by following an emotional session at the CUPE annual convention.

The dispute concerned jurisdiction over provincial government employees.

Delegates to the convention of the 156,000-member organization voted Wednesday to allow their executive to withhold contributions to the CLC if the dispute is not settled.

The resolution said that despite an agreement that all provincial government employees seeking union status must do so through CUPE, the CLC had openly encouraged direct affiliation with the congress.

If CUPE withholds contributions to its parent organization for three months, the congress charter provides for CUPE's automatic expulsion.

SAYS CHANGE MADE

Until recently, the CLC told applicants for direct membership that they must join the CLC through a recognized affiliate with jurisdiction, said Shirley Carr of Niagara Falls. But the CLC now is encouraging direct affiliation of provincial employee associations with the congress, she added.

"The purpose of labor unions is to get workers organized and the CLC has no right to tell CUPE who it can or cannot organize."

In other business, delegates were told that violence and wildcat strikes could be resorted to by workers in Quebec if the rights to negotiate and strike are not ensured.

Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, said "the courts, governments and business have done everything in their power to prevent the worker from getting a fair deal."

Mr. Laberge said it is not unusual in Quebec for an employer to phone a judge and automatically get an injunction to stop a strike.

Mr. Laberge said Prime Minister Trudeau's reasons for implementing the War Measures Act during last October's FLQ crisis were "lies" because investigations revealed no organ-

Sawmill Workers Continue Walkout

QUESNEL, B.C. (CP) — Sawmill workers employed in two J. Ernst Co. Ltd. mills in this Cariboo community voted almost unanimously Wednesday to continue a wildcat walkout prompted by a dispute about safety.

About 75 of the 80 men from the two mills, who struck Tuesday, rejected an order to return to work by Ralph Bouvette, local business agent for the International Woodworkers of America.

Crooner Stargell Leads Celebrations

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"On to the World Series," crooned Willie Stargell, leading the celebration after Pittsburgh Pirates nailed down the National League's East Division championship with a 5-1 triumph over St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday night.

While Pittsburgh locked up the East, the West Division remained a hot item although in better perspective than recent days. The front-running San Francisco Giants topped Houston Astros 3-1 and moved their lead to 2½ games over Los Angeles Dodgers, who lost 4-1 to Cincinnati Reds.

The third-place Atlanta Braves, meanwhile, were mathematically eliminated after losing 7-3 to San Diego Padres. In the other NL games, Chicago Cubs bounced New York Mets 4-1 and Montreal Expos beat Philadelphia Phillies 2-0.

"This club had pressure on it," said Pittsburgh manager

Danny Murtaugh, "but it responded well. We went into a little slump and came out of it."

The slump to which Murtaugh referred was a string of two losses Sunday and Tuesday as the Pirates failed to clinch the title while juggling the champagne around.

The East title was the second straight for the Pirates, who lost last year's NL playoffs to Cincinnati.

Luke Walker and Dave Giusti combined for a six-hitter as the Pirates clinched the division title five days earlier than last season. Walker pitched the first six innings and yielded four hits while Giusti finished up for his 28th save.

Bobby Bonds knocked in two runs, including a tie-breaking homer in the fifth inning and Juan Marichal pitched a six-hitter in San Francisco's victory that gave the Giants a little breathing room over the Dodgers.

Birds Clinch Tie For Pennant

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boog Powell slammed his 20th and 21st home runs of the season Wednesday night, each a two-run shot, as Baltimore Orioles pounded New York Yankees 10-1 and clinched a tie for the American League's East Division title.

One more Baltimore victory in seven games or one more loss by second-place Detroit Tigers in six games will make the Orioles East Division champions for the third straight year and put them into the AL playoffs against Oakland's West Division winners.

Both East teams are idle today, so the earliest pennant clinching could be Friday when the Orioles play the Indians in a two-game, one-night double-header at Cleveland, and the Tigers entertain the Yankees.

The Tigers' pennant chances were virtually extinguished Wednesday night when they dropped a 3-2 decision to Boston Red Sox. Elsewhere in the American League, Chicago White Sox blanked Oakland 3-0; Kansas City Royals walloped California Angels 10-3; and Washington Senators torched Cleveland Indians 3-2. The Milwaukee at Minnesota game was rained out.

Powell's two homers boosted his runs-batted-in total for the season to 87 and his batting average to .251, the first time he has been over the .250 mark this year.

HITS FIRST HOMER

Powell was not the only Orioles' hitting star. Rookie Bobby Grich hit his first major league homer, a three-run shot in the fifth, and Elie Hendricks collected four hits, drove in two runs and scored one.

The Orioles' power barrage helped Jim Palmer win his 19th game. He scattered six hits.

Detroit's Mickey Lolich, the winningest pitcher in the majors, was fouled in his bid for his 26th victory when Boston rallied for three runs in the eighth inning to overcome a 2-0 Tiger lead.

Singles by Billy Conigliaro and Duane Josephson and a successful bunt by pinch-hitter Phil Gagliano filled the bases. The first Boston run scored on Doug Griffin's forecourt, and the tying and winning runs came home on Luis Aparicio's double down the left field line. Lolich, 25-12, went the distance in lifting his league-leading totals to 27 complete games and 359 innings pitched.

Table Tennis May Have Club

Sixteen people attended a successful table tennis clinic held recently and talk was raised of starting a table tennis club in Kelowna with the idea in the future of sending entrants into tournaments and provincial playoffs.

The recreation department has allotted time and space for table tennis in their program this season.

The clinic opened with a brief talk on the history of table tennis and its course in B.C., then participants were engaged in learning the proper techniques of the game. Frank Karoka, president of the B.C. Table Tennis Association, Chandra Modhosingh, provincial junior development chairman, and 11-year-old Peter Joe, a junior player, instructed the clinic.

New Word In CFL Language Cost Management A Bundle

HAMILTON (CP) — The word shoebank was added to the language of the Canadian Football League last year—at considerable expense to the management.

It followed hard on the heels of installation of artificial turf at Empire Stadium in Vancouver, where British Columbia Lions decided to exchange sod for sophistication.

Shoebank is a place where visiting firemen may exchange footwear for a type more suitable to artificial grass.

Rather than force all CFL teams to invest in special shoes for different underfooting, it was decreed last year that B.C. Lions should install a shoebank from which each visiting team—for a nominal fee—would be supplied.

Hamilton Tiger-Cats followed suit this season and general manager Ralph Sazio estimates the cost of supplying about 100 pairs of shoes at about $3,000.

But he believes the league will be forced to revise its legislation if one or two more clubs join the artificial turf club. Then each team would have to buy its own sets of shoes.

Sazio said manufacturers still are experimenting with the number and design of cleats, seeking a combination of shoe and cleat favored by a majority of players.

To each his own—and to this end the Ticals have provided about 6,000 cleats that can be screwed into the shoe chosen by each player.

When Ottawa Rough Riders visit Hamilton Sunday, they won't have to go through the trial-and-error method of trying on shoes.

"We've teleaxed Ottawa for the players' sizes," said Sazio, "and when they get in, they'll find the shoes they are asking for waiting for them."

Judo Club Needs Location

The Kelowna Judo Club Wado Kon Dojo have a club, a date set to start their fall and winter schedule but no suitable place to hold their activities. The requirements of the club are for a building with about 2,000 square feet with heat and washroom facilities. The club would appreciate a call from any person having or knowing of such a building, or anyone wanting information on the club to Wilf Hoffman, 765-5822.

Canada, Britain Tied For Lead

HAMILTON, N.Z. (Reuter) — Britain, the favorite, and darkhorse Canada emerged as first-round leaders in the fourth Commonwealth women's team golf championship on the rain-soaked St. Andrews Course today.

Britain, seeking its fourth successive title since the first championship in 1952, fought back after trailing in the foursomes to take all four singles matches for a 4½-1½ win over New Zealand.

Canada mastered conditions which left many other golfers floundering as it took both foursome matches against Australia before going on to complete a 3½-2½ triumph to join Britain in a first-place tie, each with one point.

Canada scored the major upset of the day when it took a 2-0 lead over Australia after the foursomes in which the scintillating Canadian play made nonsense of the heavy conditions.

Brooks Elected League President

Bob Brooks was elected president of the Kelowna and District Babe Ruth League at their annual meeting Monday. Other officers elected were: Lloyd Cook, vice-president; secretary, Gladys Retzlaff; treasurer, Mrs. Terry DeBoice and publicity Vi Weninger and Lydia Hoffman.

A baseball clinic for all Babe Ruth boys will be held after Jan. 1, 1972, in the Centennial Hall of the Arena. Dates and times of the clinics, to be run by Murray Stewart, will be announced later.

Registration fee for next season was raised to $6 per boy and $3 for each additional child in the family. Anyone interested in coaching or managing can contact Brooks at 763-2911. The next meeting of the club will be Nov. 1 at 8 p.m. at the Capri.

WANTS GOLD MEDAL

George Athans Faces Drawback

MONTREAL (CP) — George Athans, recently-crowned world water ski champion, would like to win a gold medal for Canada at the 1976 Summer Olympics here. But there are a couple of drawbacks.

First of all water skiing hasn't been officially added to the list of sports at the 1972 Summer Games at Munich and will be handled on a demonstration basis only. And by the time the International Olympic Committee approves it as a competition for 1976, Athans figures he may not be around.

Athans, 19, of Kelowna, now a second-year arts student at Montreal's Sir George Williams University, won the overall world title at Banalos, Spain, last weekend.

In addition to the gold medal in over-all competition, he won silver medals in the jumping and slalom events. He has held the world record in slalom several times, most recently between last September and July of this year.

In addition he holds Canadian national tournament for seven consecutive years.

Stars Find Dressing Rooms. As New NHL Rules Take Toll

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chicago stars Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull took loud exception Wednesday night to a National Hockey League rule that calls for a minor penalty for a goal-keeper delaying a game.

Although Hull escaped a penalty, Mikita was banished from the game in the third period as Toronto Maple Leafs tied the Black Hawks 4-4 at Toronto.

Mikita was in the dressing room when Norm Ullman deflected the puck past goalkeeper Tony Esposito with 27 seconds remaining after Leafs had removed their goalie, Bernie Parent, for an extra attacker.

Boston Bruins' superstar Bobby Orr was also ejected from a game at Kitchener, Ont., where New York Rangers scored their first victory, 6-3, before 7,000 fans.

Elsewhere, Buffalo Sabres broke Pittsburgh Penguins' three-game winning streak with a 2-2 tie at Brantford, Ont.

Philadelphia Flyers defeated California Golden Seals 4-1 at Kingston, Ont., and Los Angeles and Vancouver battled to a 3-3 tie at Calgary, Alta.

The dispute at Maple Leaf Gardens between Mikita and referee Bruce Hood occurred after Esposito was penalized for scooping the puck over the boards.

He was charged with delaying the game, the second time the Hawks were called for that infraction.

"I mouthed off a little," Mikita said. "But all I was trying to tell him (Hood) was that Esposito was trying to clear the puck off the glass."

"It's a stupid rule anyway," exclaimed Hull, who argued that the games are often delayed for TV commercials.

Ullman's goal climaxed a Leaf rally after Pit Martin gave Hawks a 4-3 lead at 8:33 of the third. Martin beat Parent, who replaced Jacques Plante midway in the game.

Ullman also scored in the second period, along with Dave Keon, after Darryl Sittler gave Toronto a first-period lead. Two Chicago goals were supplied by Lou Angotti and one by Cliff Koroll.

PACES RANGERS

At Kitchener, Pete Stenkowski paced Rangers with two goals. Rod Gilbert, Ab DeMarco, Jack Egers and Bill Fairbairn scored the others.

Johnny Bucyk, with two, and Derek Sanderson were the Bruins' snipers.

Orr was a victim of another new rule in the NHL this season, invoked by referee John Ashley. He was charged with interfering in a fight, Bruin defenceman Dallas Smith also was banished for the same reason.

"The third man who becomes physically involved in a fight gets the penalty and his automatic $100 fine," explained Frank Udvari, eastern supervisor of NHL officials.

"He's the guy who causes an unfair advantage and leads to other players coming off the bench."

Minto Cup Play Now In Seventh

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Peterborough PCs forced a seventh and deciding game in the Minto Cup Canadian Junior Lacrosse finals Wednesday with a wild, 13-11 victory over Richmond Roadrunners.

A total of 130 minutes in penalties was handed out in a game that had to be called briefly in the second period after a lengthy fight between Ron Ryan of Peterborough and Gord Osinchuk of Richmond.

The deciding game will be played tonight. The west has not won the Minto Cup since 1962.

Jan Magee and John Grant each scored three goals and added two assists to pace the winners from Ontario. Bob Wasson scored twice while other Peterborough goals came from Tom Parnell, Len Powers, Jim Wasson, Jim Johnston and Ryan.

Walt Weaver, a pickup from New Westminster, scored three goals for the British Columbia squad. Gerry Pinder scored twice. Other Richmond goals were scored by Tom Penway, Bob Holmes, Brian Tasker, Bob Tasker, Dave Tasker and Gary Grogan.

Peterborough stormed to a 5-2 first-period lead and led 10-4 going into the final 20 minutes. However, Richmond finally got on track with seven goals in the third period.

"I'd love to ski in the Olympics as a competitor," Athans said. "But I think my days are numbered."

"Water skiing may be on the Olympic program in '76, but that's a long time away for me."

"I'm at my peak right now and maybe I can stay on top for another three years. I can't water ski all my life."

JUDGES WERE BIASED

In Europe the judges tended to be a little more lenient toward the European skiers. But the main factor was the water.

"The competition goes on all day and naturally the water is not the same at eight in the morning and three in the afternoon. In Copenhagen in 1969, I think I had the thing pretty well wrapped up, but the wind came up on me and the water got choppy. This time the factors seemed to be with me."

Athans, whose father Dr. George Athans of Kelowna was a British Empire Games diving champion, said he would like to study architecture at the University of British Columbia eventually, but has no immediate plans to move back West.

Montreal is the centre of operations for the national water ski team with training sessions held at Sherbrooke, Que., and in the Laurentian Mountains north of the city.

Athans said he will remain in this area for some time to attend to developing business interests and take part in the Western Hemisphere championships slated for Montreal next August.

"Water skiing is as hard as any other sport to become proficient," Athans said. "I don't know if I can afford the summers too much longer."

Alouettes Just Trampled Stampeders In Handing WFC Leaders Second Loss

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Alouettes beat Calgary Stampeders 26-11 in a Canadian Football League interlocking game Wednesday night and Calgary coach Jim Duncan said, "They lined up and ran over us."

With 20,821 watching, Montreal linebackers blitzed the Calgary quarterbacks time and again.

Terry Evanshen and Tom Pullen scored touchdowns for the Als and Justin Canale kicked four field goals and two converts.

The only Calgary touchdown was scored by Herm Harrison. Larry Robinson kicked a field goal, a single and a convert.

"They haven't shown as much blitz as they did tonight," said Duncan. "We knew they were going to line up and come after us, but, frankly, I didn't think they would blitz as much as they did."

UNHAPPY WITH LINE

Duncan was unhappy with the way his offensive line handled the blitz.

"We didn't get ourselves in the right frame of mind to accept the fact they were coming at us that hard," the Calgary backfield late in the

One ride will show you why Chevrolets last years—

'72 Chevelle

You like things on the sporty side—but without all the growl. Try Chevelle. Whether you choose the SS, Malibu, Heavy Chevy, 300 Deluxe or the base Chevelle you've got a number of good things going for you. There's a modern flair to its lines and all the power you need (or as much as you want). It's the mid-size mover that's very big on value.

Malibu Sport Coupe

'72 Monte Carlo

You're an individualist. So you want a personal car. But at a Chevrolet kind of price. You've got it. Monte Carlo. It's lines are long and sweeping, pure and classically simple. The luxury is uncompromised. You get power steering, power front disc brakes, V8 power—standard. Monte Carlo. Drive it. It could be your car.

Monte Carlo Coupe

'72 Camaro

You've always had your eye on a Corvair. But time's not right. Or you have a small family. Camaro—it's a sports car should be, plus it has four seats. It clings on corners. Handles beautifully. When you hit the straight-away you'll know Camaro has all the power you need. Camaro. You can tailor it just the way you want. Camaro. Closest thing to a 'Vette.

Camaro Rally Sport Coupe

'72 Nova

You like to get around with ease and economy. So it's Nova—the not-too-big, not-too-small, Chevrolet. Easy to own, to handle, to operate. And Nova is famous for its dependability. You can take five more like you, and their luggage, out on the highway or very smartly downtown. Nova. It's for you.

Nova Sedan

Caprice Sedan

'72 Caprice

Caprice has all the engineering features you've been looking for too. Double-panel roof makes a quiet car quieter. Aluminized exhaust so rust will have a tougher time of it. Steel fenders that protect the outside fenders. And more. Try Caprice. Today.

Impala Sport Coupe

'72 Impala

The '72 Impala adds a lot to your driving. By taking away the strain of manoeuvring with standard power steering. By putting standard power disc brakes up front. By making the Turbo-Hydramatic automatic transmission standard with any V8. By putting, at each wheel, a big coil spring that's been computer-matched to your particular Impala's weight. And the beautiful thing about the looks of an Impala—is that it looks like an Impala. Beautiful.

'72 Kingswood Estate

When you look at a wagon, you always look at the tailgate. Take an extra look at ours. It's different. Turn the key and the rear window automatically glides into the roof. Another turn and the counterbalanced gate drops down, and slides under the floor with one easy push. (Or you can even order a power gate). This is the tailgate for people who think a tailgate only gets in the way. It's the same with the rest of the Kingswood Estate wagon—good ideas and good engineering. And the luxury look outside. It's hard to believe this much wagon sells at a Chevrolet kind of price.

MERCHANT MARINE

CTC Given Ship Report

KELOWNA (CP) — A Canadian merchant marine will be economically worth-while under limited conditions, a report submitted to the Transport Commission.

The report, released yesterday, says a super-ship weighing more than 10,000 tons and operated by a private company would be uneconomical. But it would be profitable if operated by a government-owned company. The report says that ships from other countries are being built at a lower cost than Canadian ships. The report also says that the Canadian merchant marine is in a state of decline since the end of the Second World War. merchant marine. But operating costs, particularly crew wages, are higher for Canadian ships than for competing foreign vessels.

"Without government assistance, none of the ships examined would yield a Canadian owner the same rate of return as . . . by a foreign owner."

COMPETE IN BULK
Yet Canada would still be able to compete in the world market if it had huge bulk carriers.

These ships are partly automated, allowing operation by small crews, the consultants note. But the total number of seamen in the merchant marine could climb slightly as the fleet expanded.

The report says that in 1967, more than 47 per cent of Canada's waterborne exports were shipped to Britain and Europe while 20 per cent went to the U.S. and 24 per cent to Asian and Pacific countries.

The Asian and Pacific countries are expected to increase their share to 39 per cent in 1995, the consultants say.

This would mean a shift in importance of Canadian ports. Pacific ports would handle 55 per cent of total Canadian loadings of bulk commodities in 1995 compared with 38 per cent in 1967.

Bituminous coal is said likely to account for 20 per cent of the bulk commodity loadings in 1995 compared with two per cent in 1967.

1967. Japan is a main buyer. Wheat and flour loadings are expected to drop to six per cent in 1995 from 21 per cent in 1967 — bad news for the Prairies wheat economy.

MAINTAIN IMPORTANCE
Other bulk commodities such as iron ore and crude petroleum are likely to maintain their importance, the report says. The iron ore share of bulk loadings would be 31 per cent in 1995 while crude petroleum would account for 67 per cent of bulk imports.

Three basic types of ships are described that could carry Canadian bulk cargoes—tankers, ore carriers and bulk carriers. Combination carriers—ore-oil or ore-bulk-oil—are also popular.

Ships under 45,000 tons deadweight would be uneconomic, the consultants say. Carriers weighing between 45,000 tons and 90,000 tons would be marginally economic. Canada would gain the greatest benefit from ships weighing more than 90,000 tons.

The consultants argue that government assistance such as loans, loan guarantees, investment grants and investment loans are essential if a privately-owned fleet is to be operated successfully.

They say that a fleet of seven ships, costing $114.6 million, could bring in an annual national income of $9.2 million.

Two B.C. Stores Plan Airlift

VANCOUVER (CP)—Woodwards and Simpsons-Sears Ltd., suffering from four week delays in Vancouver's congested port, plan to fly goods from the Orient within three weeks.

The two department stores said they will bring only small quantities of goods from Hong Kong and Japan at first.

Despite jumps at Vancouver, shortages caused by a surplus of ships unable to unload at America's ports because of the U.S. West Coast dock strike, Eaton's and the Bay reported inventories in relatively good shape. Neither plan to fly goods in.

Fred Garbutt of Simpsons-Sears' eastern department said the store was running short of certain "soft wear" lines. He said transporting the goods by air would be expensive for the

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Furious Letter From Goat Ranch

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I just read your answers to cow milk problems. I am furious! Of all things, recommending soy bean milk to a person allergic to cow's milk.

Will you tell me why doctors go clear around goat's milk and put their patients on pills and every artificial device there is instead of goat's milk, the most clean, pure, perfect food God has given us?

We who are truly interested in the honest-to-goodness health of our human race have a constant battle because we are fighting doctors who would rather prescribe a pill or some artificial thing and keep the patient coming back when they could be drinking goat's milk and get well sooner and cheaper.

I am sorry but I must ask this: do you and how many other doctors have interest in soy bean factories? Our motto is help the high cost of medical care, drink goat's milk.—M.H. and M.J., Bouquet Dairy Goat Ranch.

I'm mighty sorry to have made you so furious. It's bad for your blood pressure. And I have, you know, mentioned goat's milk at times as one answer when a person is sensitive to cow's milk.

And no, I don't have any stock in any "soy bean factories," and I will not argue with your statement that your interest in goats is purely for the health of the human race.

But I'll tell you why soy bean milk is recommended so often: because it's readily available in grocery stores. It's a vegetable product, remarkably high in protein. It certainly isn't "polluted," and I wouldn't call it an "artificial device."

It is an excellent and useful substitute. I haven't said a thing against goats or their milk, and I trust that you'll not stay as angry as you sound.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 11 years old and very interested in becoming a pathologist. My mother is trying very hard to find someone I can contact for some information on this career.

There is a hospital near me that has volunteer candy-strippers (aids) which I am going to join when I am 14 to start my medical career. Could you help me find someone?—Miss J.F.

Seems to me the obvious source of some information would be a pathologist—and there must be one, or probably more, at the hospital you mention. Besides that, many state medical societies have pamphlets or brochures on careers related to medicine, so why not write to your state society?

Eleven may be a bit young to make up your mind definitely—but pathology is a demanding though fascinating and necessary specialty, so more power to you.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you please explain what mononucleosis is? Is it contagious?—M.S.

Full name is infectious mononucleosis, quite common among young people, but it is also what is known as a self-limited disease. That is, there isn't any "cure" for it, but you get over it, just as you get over a cold. Only it takes longer, and you temporarily lose all your pep and may have sore, swollen glands.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have to stick to margarine to avoid cholesterol. To my wife it does not make any difference. My daughter, 12, has gotten so used to margarine that she doesn't like butter at all. She drinks a normal amount of milk daily. Are we depriving her of the benefit of butter?—P.C.

No. So don't worry about it.

Opening lead—queen of clubs.

Card reading is the very backbone of good dummy play. To be able to visualize the opponents' cards accurately is more than half the battle, and to go the rest of the way in taking advantage of this is usually much the easier part of the journey.

Take this deal where South had to function on all cylinders to land the grand slam. East's three notrump bid, after passing originally, was the unusual notrump. It showed 5-5 or 6-5 distribution in the minors.

South cubed diamonds to show the ace, and West tried to gum up the works by jumping to six clubs. North showed second-round diamond control with six diamonds, and South decided to go all the way.

West led the queen of clubs and declarer saw that the grand slam was in grave danger. There was a diamond loser and it appeared that his only hope of avoiding this was to rely on a heart finesse.

But upon thinking the matter over, South realized the finesse was marked by West's opening lead with the A-K of clubs and since he was likely to have the Q-J of diamonds for his three notrump bid, it became impossible for him to also hold the king of hearts in view of his pass originally. The most East could hold in hearts was the jack.

Accordingly, South seized his one slim chance for the contract by ruffing the club, cashing the ace of hearts, and continuing with the queen, forcing West to cover with the king.

The rest was duck soup. Declarer ruffed a club, led a trump, ruffed the last club and ran dummy's trumps. On the last one, East holding the jack of hearts and Q-J-8 of diamonds, found it impossible to discard successfully in front of South's ten of hearts and A-4 of diamonds. As a result, South brought home the grand slam.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)

—Be careful how you present your ideas. You could out-talk yourself.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus)—If an agreement is pending, try to defer conclusion until tomorrow.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini)—Don't let outsiders influence your attitude toward co-workers or loved ones.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—In mid-morning, avoid discussions which could upset associates.

July 24 to Aug. 23 (Leo)—Romance under a cloud. Be prepared for the unexpected and disconcerting.

Aug. 24 to Sept. 23 (Virgo)—A planned "trip for profit" won't pay off. Forget it.

Sept. 24 to Oct. 23 (Libra)—Something of importance is being decided in your favor.

Oct. 24 to Nov. 22 (Scorpio)—An idea you get intuitively delights superiors; brings pleasing reward.

Nov. 23 to Dec. 21 (Sagittarius)—Ambitious plans are opposed. Forget for a while.

Dec. 22 to Jan. 20 (Capricorn)—Don't reject changes. Remember that variety is the spice of life.

Jan. 21 to Feb. 19 (Aquarius)—This could be a somewhat erratic day unless you steer a steady course.

Feb. 20 to March 20 (Pisces)—In financial matters, depend on your own judgment, not that of others.

ASTROSPECTS — Planetary influences for this morning indicate some difficulty in the art of communication. There will be tendencies toward misinterpretation, even to deliberate distortion of facts on the part of some. It will be a period in which to be wary, to carefully evaluate words, whether written or oral, since the absence of exactitude could lead to serious errors, needless arguments. Later, and through the evening, a much more coherent trend will be observed. Faculties will be sharper, ideas clarified.

Danger Of Another Uprising At Attica Says Commissioner

NEW YORK (AP)—There is danger of another uprising by convicts at Attica state prison, Russell Oswald, New York state commissioner of correction, says.

"I think without question that there are some of these hard-core Monks who would love to start the thing up again, and who will get support and help they can find from people on the outside," he said.

"In the light of what they told me repeatedly out in the yard, one has to be prepared for possible difficulties," Oswald said in an interview with Walter Cronkite on the CBS Evening News Tuesday.

He estimated the hard-core leadership consisted of up to 40 men, almost all of whom said they were armed assault men. It was state police that ended the four-day rebellion.

In a longer version of the interview broadcast later, Oswald said he felt strongly that such radical militants should be isolated from other prisoners, but that lack of space and federal court decisions made that impossible.

As to the assault that ended the outbreak in which 10 inmates and 30 prisoners died, Oswald said the threat of anarchy among the convicts left him "no choice" but to order the troops in.

"I had to make a decision as to whether I could longer delay, permit them to arm, take the chance that they might start killing correction officers or their own men," he said.

Survey Shows Too Many Hitch-Hikers On Road

OTTAWA (CP) — Young travellers are concerned that there are too many hitch-hikers on the roads for all to get rides, a survey of transient youth in Canada this summer has found.

The survey of 222 persons aged 14-25 years and representing 20 cities was done for the Canadian Council on Social Development which is holding its annual meeting here.

The council is a national voluntary organization which analyzes the causes of social breakdown and need.

Mrs. Charlotte Unsworth, the project assistant, told council members today that most of those surveyed felt that a bus service for transients would be the answer.

"This service could be provided at a cheaper rate to enable more youth to travel," she said. "A bus service should also be provided in larger cities to transport youth from one end of the city to the other to enable them to proceed with their travel."

WANTS LAWS RELAXED
She said young people surveyed also often said hitch-hiking laws should be relaxed.

"Many felt that hostels should make youth feel at home, with indefinite staying periods and better organization. They should be open 24 hours a day and allow children and groups to stay together."

"It was suggested that a hostel be set up in every city with a population of more than 50,000 citizens. Fewer local youth staying at hostels would also alleviate the over-crowding problem."

Food should be available at the hostel and schools should provide students with a list of transient-youth facilities across Canada, some young travellers suggested.

The establishment of emergency relief centres would make it easier for young people to get welfare "and police should recognize youth as free agents with a rightful place in society."

Some travellers said, however, that transients using hostels should help maintain them and others said transients should be entirely responsible for their own welfare, not dependent in any way on governments or others.

Many of the young people felt they should try "to project a better public image" and some suggested that there should be more youth work projects and craft shops, Mrs. Unsworth said.

The most frequently mentioned means of subsistence of the 222 young people interviewed was "a combination of two or more of savings, welfare, pushing, handling or working" for 39.1 per-cent of them.

Savings was the highest sole means of support, accounting for 31 per-cent of those interviewed, with work the second highest at 12 per-cent and pan-handling a close third.

"Pushing forms only nine-tenths of one per-cent of the total means of subsistence, but it should be noted that it appeared quite frequently in the 39.1 per-cent combination category," Miss Unsworth reported.

About 88 per-cent of the young people interviewed were 17 years old or more.

Approximately 74 per-cent spoke English and 18 per-cent spoke French.

Almost 60 per-cent said they would have chosen to travel even if a summer job had been available. A total of 49 per-cent planned to return to school this fall as compared to about 17 per-cent in a similar survey done in 1969 for the council.

The Official Secrets Act In Process Of Overhaul

LONDON (CP) — As late as 1935 the British government stopped the auction sale of 1800-1815 letters written by the Duke of Wellington and Admiral Nelson about the frail British espionage system in France before the Battle of Waterloo.

About the same time, a 60-year-old clerk making £3 a week in the statistics department here was not only fired but jailed for six weeks for tipping a newspaper to the contents of the wills of three minor celebrities a few hours before they were due to be announced officially.

These are just a couple of the often strange surfacings of Britain's Official Secrets Act, one of those outdated statutes which occasionally rise to plague both government officials and reporters.

It is one of these old pieces of lawmaking that stay on the statute books mainly because no one thought of taking it off.

The Official Secrets Act is in the process of overhaul now largely because three men and a newspaper were charged under it last year. All were acquitted. Such a breath of fresh air blew over the statute that the government has set up an inquiry commission to recommend changes.

OUT OF DATE

The measure in its present form was given a departing boost by the trial judge in the latest case, Mr. Justice Bernard Caudfield. He not only recommended to the jury all-around acquittal but observed that the section of the Official Secrets Act under which the defendants were charged is due for retirement.

The case in question was a prosecution based on the fact that The Sunday Telegraph published extracts from an assessment of the progress of the civil war in Nigeria, which got into print at about the time the war was over in early 1970. It was written by a British government observer in Lagos and came into publication by a roundabout route.

The Labor government then in office launched charges against a selected number of those involved in publication under a clause of the old legislation making it an offence for any unauthorized person to receive or communicate official information.

Jonathan Aitken, grand-nephew of the late Canadian Lord Beaverbrook and a war correspondent in Nigeria, was among those trapped under a vague clause in the act and now has written a book digging into its history.

POLITICAL DISASTER

Though he was later thoroughly cleared of breaking the law, for the 27-year-old Aitken the prosecution was something of a personal political disaster, at least temporarily.

At the time he was charged, journalist and broadcaster Aitken was Conservative candidate for the clutch Tory seat of Thrusk in the 1970 general election. He suspended his political career pending the outcome of his case.

In his book called Officially Secret, Aitken tells of other reporters and some government officials in trouble over the secrets act and a parallel operation of the government called the "D Notice". The D notice is used by a government committee to suggest to publications what they may or may not print without at least supposedly endangering the state.

The "D Notice" operation has tripped over its own feet a number of times but the most celebrated incident came in 1967 when Chapman Pincher of The Daily Express ran a correct story to the effect that the defence department was making a daily truck collection of all overseas cables and browsing through them for security reasons.

WILSON DISSENTS

Harold Wilson's Labor government set up a "privy council committee of inquiry" which eventually exonerated Pincher. The Express and Col. Sammy Lohan, secretary of the D Notice committee, who had told Pincher he was not breaching the law, Wilson's government shortly issued a white paper saying the findings of its own committee were all wrong.

However, the D Notice system, though fairly well disregarded, still operates.

Apart from Pincher, Aitken tells of some others who have run afoul of the Official Secrets Act when going about what they might normally consider their lawful business.

CABINET LEAK

Here are a few instances: 1. Scotland Yard in 1930 descended on a reporter who had sprung a story, right as it turned out, that the British government had ordered the arrest of India's Mahatma Gandhi. The case was dropped when it developed that the leak came from a cabinet minister.

2. A crime reporter on the Manchester Daily Dispatch was fined for revealing the contents of a police circular describing a man wanted for fraud.

3. The names of Britain's intelligence chiefs—MI 5 and MI

6—are traditionally secret, though anyone interested can find them out. When one of them retired—though he had been named in an American magazine—a D Notice deterred a newspaper from publishing a photograph of the back of his head as he walked off with his personal files.

4. When some newspapers were getting ready to break stories on Harold (Kim) Philby—a top foreign office man who was Russia's super-spy here—the D Notice committee issued a circular virtually prohibiting this. The instructions were ignored, on the ground that the revelations gave nothing away to Russia—Philby had already defected—and merely showed up spying incompetence by the government.

"FREEDOM DAMAGED"

5. A retired prison governor, who peddled the story of a hanged killer's confession, was fined £250 under the Official Secrets Act.

"But although direct official action always causes the loudest journalistic protests," Aitken says, "it is the indirect action of the law on officials which does most damage to press freedom."

"Under modern conditions in the civil service, the Official Secrets Act successfully dries up all potential sources of government information except for the authorized hand-out."

The over-all effect of having the act dangling like a sword of Damocles over the head of every minor bureaucrat is that Britain today has the most closed government in the free world, a situation which seriously hinders the legitimate activities of a free press."

International Corporations Rapped By Catholic Bishops

EDMONTON (CP) — International corporations which take more out of a country in profits than they put in as capital investment were blamed by Canadian Roman Catholic bishops Wednesday for being major contributors to the widening gap between rich and poor nations.

The topic was discussed during a meeting at the Canadian Catholic Conference, an association of cardinals, archbishops and bishops preparing for the synod in Rome which starts next week.

It was introduced by several bishops during workshops Tuesday but the main accusation Wednesday came from Romeo Malone of Montreal, executive director of the Canadian Catholic Organization for Development and Peace.

Mr. Malone said the church must take a stand on parasitic nations which suck life-giving resources out of poorer nations with the help of mammoth multinational corporations.

HEAR WARNING

While a majority of the bishops wanted such action included in a wide-ranging program of social reform, they were warned by one bishop the church would reduce its effectiveness by spreading its influence too thinly.

Most Rev. F. A. Mallico of

Peterborough, Ont. said the only way the church really can be effective is by establishing priorities instead of "trying to spread itself over all the problems of the world."

It was recommended that the church adopt a policy of financial openness as one step along the path to credibility.

"If we can't explain this to the people, we're going to be caught in between," said Mr. Malone. "How can I defend the holy and church if I don't have the facts?"

This echoed a statement by Rev. Patrick Keenan, a Jesuit who is one of the conference's social action directors. He said unsubstantiated rumors of untold wealth in the Vatican coffers of the church if I don't have the facts.

POLICY NECESSARY

Archbishop Alexander Carter of Saint Ste. Marie had said an open financial policy is necessary "simply because of the exaggerated accounts of the church's holdings."

Much of Wednesday's afternoon session was devoted to "house-cleaning" as the bishops broke into workshop groups to discuss the fundamental law of the church.

All sessions today, including more workshops on fundamental law, were closed to the press.

William E. Power, Bishop of Antigonish, N.S. and former vice-chancellor of the Montreal archdiocese, was elected president of the conference.

Little Rumor Can Go A Long Way

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — A little rumor can go a long way in this world organization.

Take the case of Prime Minister Trudeau.

A responsible UN official returned here recently from a trip to Geneva. He said in lunch room conversations that the gossip in the corridors there is that the Canadian prime minister "has the inside track" for the job of secretary-general, soon to be vacated by U Thant of Burma.

The UN official thought the rumor a joke because Trudeau is not considered a man who would give up the prime minister's office for one here.

But the word got out and soon it was being reported on at least one wire service.

This week rumors have been more than usually thick as the 130-country General Assembly opened.

OTHER RUMORS

Other rumors, some based on published speculative reports, include:

President Nixon is going to China after meeting Emperor Hirohito of Japan in Alaska Monday. He wants to get to China before there is a chance of his having to meet Premier Kosygin of the Soviet Union. The White House denied the report Wednesday.

There are variations to the theme of China joining the UN. One published report, repeated here, was that Chou en-lai, Chinese premier, was prepared to journey to the UN.

A current rumor is that the Chinese embassy in Ottawa has been strengthened so that a delegation will be ready to attend the General Assembly after Peking is voted in.

There are several reasons why rumors can get a good head of steam here. Not the least of them is that they can be true. For instance, there were rumors of a Canada-Peking agreement to exchange ambassadors here a week before such agreement was officially announced last year.

ON THE PRAIRIES

U.S. Surtax Will Hurt

EDMONTON (CP) — Jean Beaudry, vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress, told the Canadian Union of Public Employees' convention Wednesday the U.S. 10-per-cent import surcharge could affect every Canadian.

FEDS DON'T CARE
REGINA (CP) — Provincial Agriculture Minister Jack Mesher said Wednesday by withholding payments under the Temporary Wheat Reserves Act the federal government shows complete lack of concern for the West.

PROF STANDS TRIAL
EDMONTON (CP) — Keith Latta, U. of A. law professor at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., was committed Wednesday to stand trial for the non-capital murder last June of city travel agent Bob Neville.

RAF ESCAPING SOCIETY TO HONOR THREE HEROES

MONTREAL (CP) — A "helper" during the Second World War was a person who took hair-raising risks of torture, concentration camp and death by smuggling downed Allied airmen out of Nazi occupied Europe.

Three of the bravest will arrive from France this weekend as guests of the Royal Air Forces Escaping Society, which has a Canadian membership of 142.

"There is no way of describing the bond that exists between the escapees or evaders and the helpers of those terribly dark days," said one RCAF veteran who went through the underground network.

Gratitude and admiration has remained undimmed through the years between evaders and helpers, even when they were not personally acquainted.

LAND IN OTTAWA

Arriving late Friday at Ottawa's Uplands Airport, then coming direct to Montreal, are these much-decorated heroes of the French Resistance: —Leon Dumis, who in 1943 formed with two other Frenchmen an escape network for Allied airmen shot down in Normandy, smuggling 87 flyers to Switzerland. —Georges Brion, who helped set up the two-sector Brandy escape line, collecting evaders headed for the Spanish border until he himself had to escape with the Gestapo at his heels.

—Marcel Cola, who spent 12 years of his childhood from 1908 to 1919 in Edmonton and Montreal but returned to his fatherland.

Mr. Brion and Mr. Cola will be accompanied by their wives.

A larger group from the Union Nationale des Evadees de Guerre—comprising Frenchmen who escaped after the fall of France and fought Hitler from abroad—is scheduled to arrive Monday for a separate visit.

The Colas, Brions and Mr. Dumis will be entertained at a reception here Monday and travel to Quebec City Wednesday, later visiting Ottawa, Toronto and Peterborough before their departure from Ottawa for France Oct. 14. They will attend the RAFES annual meeting at Montebello, Que., Oct. 2.

CHARGE FOR CHURCHILL LONDON (CP) — Octogenarian Wally Dunwoody, a cabbie for 60 years, claims he introduced Winston Churchill to tipping in 1947. After a lift, Dunwoody had to explain that cabbies do not receive a weekly wage and therefore welcome tips, contrary to Churchill's belief. Dunwoody got sixpence out of the famous politician—and still has it somewhere.

Newfoundland Had Lowest Income Rate

OTTAWA (CP) — Per-capita personal incomes ranged last year from $1,784 in Newfoundland to a high of $3,584 in Ontario, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

Second-lowest income per person was recorded in Prince Edward Island—$1,955 for the year—and the second highest was in British Columbia—$3,293.

The average income per person across Canada was $3,092. This was almost 50 per cent higher than five years earlier, when it was $2,066.

Incomes per capita in the lower-income provinces rose faster than 50 per cent in the five years. Per-capita incomes in 1965 in Newfoundland were $1,154, and in Prince Edward Island, $1,248.

They rose less rapidly in the richer provinces. Per-capita incomes in 1965 in Ontario were $2,409, and in British Columbia, $2,334.

MOVE AND KNITS MOVE WITH YOU

When you move, knits move. They stretch. Not out of shape, mind you, but just enough to eliminate resistance to your sitting and bending. When you straighten up, so will your knits. There'll be no tell-tale signs of your activity, either. No baggy knees or seat or elbows. And not a wrinkle in sight. Knits are new. They are exceptionally comfortable and consistently handsome. And, they're at Simpsons-Sears right now.
